REPEAL THE 18TH AMENDMENT!

Delegations Choose Platform Makers.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Caucuses of the delegations from the various states to the G. O. P. convention occupied most of last night. In numerous cases the decisions outlined clear cut policies with respect to the major issues confronting the convention—prohibition, economy, etc. Other states are still divided.

The result of the night's caucuses will bear on platform making and indicated that the convention floor will witness a momentous battle over the prohibition plant.

The liquor issue overshadowed all else—farm relief, reduction of cost of government, revenue reform, and the rest. The resolutions committee, which builds the party platform, will start work this afternoon, probably at 4 o'clock.

As the night wore on signs of prohibition revolt among the delegates grew. Administration leaders scurried around pressing for a compromise that would, if possible, get rid of the word "repeal." In the caucuses, however, delegations from states which have been dry gave expressions for submission of repeal of the 18th amendment.

Who'll Run the Show?

Will the bosses or the delegates run the show? This was the question echoing in the caucus rooms. The repealists renewed their threats of carrying the battle to a verdict of the delegates if the resolutions committee puts out a plank that straddles or is merely dampish.

Maine, pioneer prohibition state, was a shock of the night to the drys and damps. By a vote of 11 to 2 its delegation came out for submission of repeal of the 18th amendment. Col. Fred N. Dow of Portland, son of Neal Dow, early prohibition advocate, was one of the two who stayed dry.

The New Jersey delegation at its caucus threw in a new bone of contention in the form of a repeal plank written by Ambassador Walter E. Edge, modeled on the plan laid down by the late Senator Dwight Morrow. This plank is for repeal and for a substitute for the eighteenth amendment that will still give the federal government power to enforce dry laws of states remaining dry. It is assailed on the ground that it still retains vestiges of national infringment upon state's rights. Mr. Edge is prepared to carry the fight to the floor of the convention.

Michigan Chooses Liberal Leader.

Michigan, which went dry before the eighteenth amendment, named Fred W. Green, former governor, a man of liberal views, as its member of the resolutions committee. The Michigan state convention weeks ago voted for resubmission of repeal.

Indiana, which came out in state convention for submission of repeal a few days ago, put on the platform committee Henry W. Marshall, Lafayette publisher, who framed and fought through the Indiana "temperance plank" for submission of repeal. Arizona decided to ask for repeal. It put Frank Hitchcock, Republican national chairman in the Taft days, on the platform committee and urged him to fight for an absolute repeal submission plank.

Iowa put J. N. (Ding) Darling, cartoonist of Des Moines, on the platform group. He is a liberal. Gov. Dan Turner was bowled over for the post. He said he was not in sympathy with resubmission.

Hoover Adviser Is Rejected.

California gave the gate to Ray Benjamin, "the Col. House of the Hoover administration," and picked C. C. Teague as its platform maker. Teague is a former dry who says he is for resubmission. He holds that the noble experiment is a failure, as evidenced by the bootlegger fortunes and the growth of crime and corruption.

The Washington state delegation sponsored a plank similar to the New York repeal submission plank which was unanimously approved by the New York delegates on Sunday night. Montana instructed for resubmission. Rhode Island called for a plank that would give the people a chance to wipe out prohibition—it is "not concerned over the phraseology."

Georgia, in the dry south, is to let its delegates vote as individuals, not as a unit, and said so.

HOPE

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Like an old fashioned revival meeting was that assemblage last evening of 8,000 men and women at the historic Coliseum on Wabash avenue in the cause of temperance reform.

They sang the anthems of the republic. They listened to a prayer for the ending of the scandals of bogus prohibition, and they echoed with one voice the clergyman's vigorously spoken "Amen."

A Many Sided Meeting.

The most vital phases of American life and culture were represented by the speakers. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, New York, spoke for the world of education; Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, for the toilers; Mrs. Charles H. Sabin of New York, chairman of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, for American womanhood; Raymond Pitcairn of Philadelphia for rebel Republicans who have pledged themselves to make no more contributions to their party's war chest until it takes a firm stand for repeal of the eighteenth amendment; Capt. Fred G. Clark of Cleveland for the Crusaders, of whom he is national commander, and Mayor Cermak for our city.

Varied Moods Expressed.

The meeting was by turns reverent and jubilant and its speakers—from the stately Butler and the stalwart Cermak to gentle Mrs. Sabin—dealt vigorously with the issue which they said is at this hour the supreme issue before the American people.

That issue they defined thus:

"Shall the major parties in national convention in Chicago this month be permitted to straddle and equivocate on the question of prohibition repeal?"

After the meeting was called to order by Col. Robert R. McCormick, Mayor Cermak began the speechmaking with revelations that made the audience gasp.

"We," said the mayor, "we of Chicago and Illinois have in recent months had to wait until the board of pardons released hardened criminals from the state penitentiary before we could find room for newly convicted criminals.

"Prohibition has crowded our prisons and, not doubled, but quadrupled our taxes. The waste, the scandals, and the disorganization it has caused will lead the future historian to record it as 'the mad experiment' but I believe, too, that he will record you as of the great army of patriots who fought for the restoration of American ideals.

"If our national parties are true to

PLANE CRASHES NEAR WHEATON; THREE INJURED

Three Chicagoans were critically injured last evening when their plane fell 300 feet and crashed upon a field near Roselle, six miles north of Wheaton, close to the junction of Irving Park boulevard and the Bloomingdale road.

At the Elmhurst hospital it was found that all three victims had fractured skulls in addition to other injuries. The men are: Joseph Krivis, 25 years old, of 920 North Hoyne avenue, co-owner and pilot; Stanley Lichon, also 25, of 2518 North Austin avenue, an insurance employé; and Harold Luka, 24, of 2138 North Menard avenue, an inspector. Lichon and Luka may die.

The plane took off from the Greer field at Elmhurst. Harry Benhart, a farmer who saw the crash, said the pilot apparently started a dive at about 800 feet. After diving about 500 feet, Benhart said, the pilot tried to straighten out, but the plane swirled on to the ground.

The ship was a Swallow biplane, with a 90 horsepower OX-5 motor. It was known as the "Three Joe" plane because its owners, Joseph Krivis, Joseph Syska, and Joseph Markowski, have the same first names.

Dry Forces Tell G. O. P. to Stay on Wagon

BY WALTER FITZMAURICE.

The militant drys loosed two final blasts yesterday and last night in a last effort to hold President Hoover and the Republican party in line for their cause on the eve of the Republican national convention.

The Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement, professing to speak for 12,000,000 feminine voters of the land, shook the roof of the Naval Reserve armory with delicious cheering for Volsteadism at a loyalty luncheon, assailed the Republican liberal leaders as a crew of traitors, and fired off a telegram to the White House telling the President to take heed.

Warning to G. O. P. Leaders.

Late in the evening the prohibition board of strategy, comprising E. C. Dinwiddie, E. H. Cherrington, Scott McBride and others of the Anti-Saloon league crowd from Westerville, O., disposed of the local situation by issuing a final encyclical, advising the Republican convention to remain bone dry.

"The prohibition board of strategy is unanimous in its opposition to any declaration by the convention which attempts in any way to influence congress to propose action on the prohibition question in any form," the Westerville dictum read. "We do favor action by the convention pledging the vigorous and efficient enforcement of the 18th amendment as an integral part of the constitution."

Twenty-seven hundred women filled the armory for the loyalty luncheon. Representatives spoke for the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the Federation of Women's Boards of Foreign Missions, the Congress of Parents and Teachers, the National Council of Federated Churchwomen, the W. C. T. U., and lesser affiliated organizations.

Grandmother Makes Plea.

The keynote of the meeting, an utterance which brought the women to their feet cheering wildly, was sounded by Mrs. F. I. Johnson of New York, a frail, snowy haired grandmother with amazing vocal powers.

"If President Hoover stands firm for prohibition, God bless him," she cried. "If he wobbles, God pity him.

"A shepherd dog is the meekest of canines until goaded to the limit," she warned. "It then becomes the fiercest. Let the outlaw gangsters beware."

Five minutes of applause greeted her statement. The women wore their arms weary waving handkerchiefs and tiny flags in the salute of the W. C. T. U. The 200 clergymen scattered through the crowd forgot their dignity and yelled with the abandon of baseball fans.

Mrs. Johnson hushed them with a

AN EDITORIAL

The eighteenth amendment will be repealed or nullified. The Republican party can assist in the preferred procedure or it can take its share of the responsibility for the less desirable. A penalty will be incurred by the party if it is plainly obstructive or discoverably deceitful.

Nothing is clearer in American political purpose today than the desire to bring national prohibition to an end. The amendment represents one of the very serious mistakes of the republic. The initial mistake may be condoned on the ground of good intentions. It may be explained by the high emotional pitch of the country and by general submissiveness in wartime to government control of the individual. Otherwise neither reason nor prudence could have been brought to endure this strange injection of virus into the constitution of the United States and the American system of government.

A continuance of the mistake will have none of the extenuations which could be granted its beginning. Experience has indicted and convicted the experiment. Farsighted citizens might accurately have predicted the evils which must attend it. The least prescient citizen can see them now. They are in the record of the last ten years. They are in the plain view of this present day. They threaten the future.

A majority of the people in a majority of the states are opposed to a continuance under the amendment. They have shown this in their elections and the acts of their legislatures. The majority already may have the necessary three-fourths for repeal. It is, in any case, a large majority.

No law in a democracy of English legal traditions and inheritances can exist against the will of a majority. When repeal has seemed inexpedient or impractical, because of some confused sentiment or some cobwebs of precedent which bind as steel chains, the English speaking people have circumvented the undesired law, with complete illogicality and indifference.

Only the simple mind regards the flexible law of America and England as a crystal permanence to be enforced until it is repealed or thinks that repeal is the only escape if the law is undesirable or obnoxious.

The eighteenth amendment will not continue to govern the American states. They have experimented with it and suffered under it. Inasmuch as they still are inhabited by citizens accustomed to reach decisions and have their will converted into political action they will not remain under a law which they find intolerable. This certainly presents two questions.

What shall be done to alleviate conditions pending the repeal of the amendment and the return of regulatory power to the states?

What will be the situation in the states if repeal is not permitted and the alternative of nullification is forced upon the majority?

The submission of the repeal is a promise of betterment, not an immediate realization of it. The constitution is a rock, and change, even when there is a great desire for it throughout the nation, takes time. Meanwhile the Volstead act is in effect. The agents of the prohibition unit are at large. The bootlegger, the political racket, the bigot, and the gangster are in control. If the matter rests, even with the fairest submission of the amendment, conditions which have been found undesirable are not thereby removed. The interim remedy is the repeal of the Volstead act. That statute is the instrument by which the inherent wrongs of the eighteenth amendment are converted into action. It and its companion pieces, such as the Jones act, put theory into practice. They must be repealed to give effect to the changes the people demand. Otherwise the country faces an indefinite period of gangster and bigot rule, with all their attendant evils in government.

The country is suffering today what the south recalls as the trial of reconstruction when it nearly succumbed in humiliation, exhaustion, and despair under the whip of zealots who had no equal in American history until the eighteenth amendment bred their identical kind again. The eventual relief of the south came with the withdrawal of armed forces who cannot be compared with the gunmen of prohibition because they were disciplined soldiers. If the eighteenth amendment were designed by the south, where it originated, as revenge for unforgettable injuries, it must be conceded that payment has been taken in full.

No carpetbagger whom the south can recall ever did greater execution against social order than has been done by Bishop James Cannon Jr. and his companion clerical politicians in power in Washington. Bishop Cannon will go the way of Thaddeus Stevens.

Control of the use of intoxicants has been striving to reach an equilibrium and has not yet succeeded, although now is the best chance. That there was a problem was recognized with colonization. Georgia at its founding prohibited rum and slavery. The Maine movement of 1846 took in thirteen states, including Illinois, before it finally spent itself and repeals took all the states out again. States have gone in and out of prohibition, both statutory and constitutional, seldom satisfied with what they got.

With repeal of the eighteenth amendment there is now a better opportunity than the country has yet had to find its balance. Until national prohibition had been tried there would be waves of sentiment in that direction and some spasmodic effort would probably attain the end sooner or later. Thus an undetermined factor would be always present. With the trial and failure of the amendment that factor is removed.

The country is now full of experience. The states are better advised than before. They should have learned that regulation so closely concerned with human nature is better undertaken by small political units. Certainly Kansas is a sounder judge of its own conditions and needs than it is of New York's. Luckily the structure of the American Union can recognize diversities of sentiment and habit without imposing one opinion on another.

Nullification can end national prohibition, but it cannot substitute so well ordered a state as will be made possible by repeal. If the will of the great majority is blocked in the legal road which should be open to it, it will soon find other expression. One house of congress can refuse appropriations to national prohibition enforcement as it does to other laws on the statute books. The enforcement unit in the department of justice will be closed. Federal agents will be withdrawn, as the army of occupation was withdrawn from the southern states. The undesirable thing this leaves in its wake is that the states are without legal authority to deal in their own law with regulation of alcoholic beverages. An obsolete amendment in the constitution will stop them. By statute they can prohibit but not regulate or control.

It is unnecessary to repeat here the manifest injuries national prohibition has done national life. When the American people finally resolved that nothing less than their freedom would satisfy them a great American wrote their Declaration of Independence. Tyrannies are generic. They are composed of one substance and animated by one spirit. Therefore it is found that what Thomas Jefferson wrote in indictment of George III. is with slight paraphrase a perfect indictment of the soul and works of Volstead. To quote and paraphrase:

The history of the eighteenth amendment is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute tyranny over these states. To prove this let facts be submitted to a candid world. It has made judges dependent on its will. It has erected a multitude of new offices and sent out swarms of officers to harass our people. It has subjected us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, giving assent to acts —for quartering large bodies of armed men among us—for protecting them by mock trial from punishment for any murders which they should commit on the inhabitants of these states—for depriving us in many cases of the benefits of trial by jury—for abolishing our most valuable laws and altering fundamentally the forms of our government. In every stage of these oppressions we have petitioned for redress. Our repeated petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A law whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a tyrant is unfit to be the law of a free people.

DAWES BOOMED AS WET PLANK GOES TO HOOVER

Fight on Curtis Is Made General.

Today's Program

Senator Fess of Ohio, national chairman, will call the convention to order at 11 a. m. The order of business follows:

PRAYER—By Bishop Freeman of Washington, D. C.

CONVENTION CALL—Read by Secretary Keim of the national committee, followed by temporary roll call.

ELECTION of temporary chairman, followed by his address and the election of other temporary officers.

COMMITTEES selected on credentials, permanent organization, rules and order of business, and resolutions, followed by miscellaneous business.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

With a prohibition plank agreed upon by the leaders here and telegraphed to President Hoover for his approval or revision, and with the movement for the nomination of Gen. Dawes running like wild fire through the delegations the Republican national convention will meet in the Stadium at 11 a. m. today.

The prohibition plank commits the party to a program of action making possible the submission of a new amendment to the constitution in effect repealing the 18th amendment but providing that the federal government shall continue to enforce prohibition in states electing to remain dry. The plank resembles to a considerable degree the prohibition reform plan evolved by the late Senator Dwight Morrow of New Jersey.

Pledge Against Saloon.

The plank declares for strict enforcement of prohibition so long as it is the law. It places the party on record against the restoration of the saloon. Finally it proposes the ratification of the new amendment by conventions in the several states instead of by the legislatures.

The phraseology of the declaration was agreed upon at midnight at a meeting of administration leaders at the Chicago club. It was the telegraphed to the White House, where it will be placed before the President this morning. Mr. Hoover is to pass judgment on the production and return the text approved or amended before the resolutions committee of the convention gets down to the work of platform framing tonight.

Who's Who at Conference.

Participating in the Chicago club conference which turned out the plank were Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills, Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of the Interior Ray Lyman Wilbur, Secretary of Labor William N. Doak, Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde, James R. Garfield, chairman designate of the resolutions committee; former Senator Henry Allen of Kansas, and Walter Newton, political secretary to the President.

The agreement broke a deadlock in the cabinet group on the character of the prohibition declaration that had persisted since early in the day. Secretaries Wilbur and Hyde had stood out for a vague declaration committing the party to a "constructive solution" of the problem. Secretary Mills and Postmaster General Walter F. Brown were for going much further in the direction of satisfying the demands of the advocates of repeal. The agreement represented a compromise.

Dawes Issues Statement.

While numerous delegations were caucusing on men and measures there came news from Washington late yesterday afternoon that Gen. Dawes had sought to discourage the movement to nominate him for second place on the ticket instead of renominating Vice President Charles Curtis. After declining to discuss the matter earlier in the day, Gen. Dawes finally issued the following statement:

"I am not a candidate for the nomination for vice president. No one is or will be authorized to present my name to the convention and I request my friends not to embarrass me by their support."

Statement Stimulates Boom.

Because this statement failed to close the door irrevocably, due to the fact that Gen. Dawes refrained from saying he would not accept if drafted, the Dawes boomers, instead of being dissuaded, were encouraged to redoubled efforts.

The first answer to the Dawes statement came from the Iowa delegation, which voted solidly to make the general the Hoover running mate.

The next came from Texas, which voted unanimously to place Gen. Dawes in nomination in the convention in the event that Illinois, in deference to the general's attitude, fails to do so. The Texans decided to request the Alabama delegation to yield to Texas at the beginning of the roll call in order to present the name of Dawes ahead of any others.

Pays Tribute to Curtis.

Robert Creager, national committeeman from Texas, made a speech in which he paid high tribute to Vice President Curtis.

"But," he said, "we are entering upon a hard fight in this campaign and the party stands in sore need of a younger, more energetic, more resourceful campaigner. In Gen. Charles G. Dawes——"

That was as far as he got. The members of the delegation leaped to their feet and stood cheering for Dawes. The formal indorsement of the general followed.

"I have a list of delegates in my pocket who will vote for Gen. Dawes and who are sufficiently numerous to insure his nomination," said Mr. Creager after the meeting of the delegation.

Among the delegations in addition to Iowa and Texas which are said to be overwhelming for Dawes are Pennsylvania, Ohio, New York, California, Colorado, and Illinois.

Friends Fear for Curtis.

Some of the friends of Vice President Curtis confessed misgivings that he is doomed to defeat unless he should withdraw before the balloting.

As a result of these developments there was a widespread opinion among the leaders that whoever is nominated for second place on the ticket it will not be Mr. Curtis. It is expected that Gen. Dawes will be named unless he should remove himself from consideration as effectively as did Gen. Sherman when he said he would not accept if nominated and would not serve if elected.

If Gen. Dawes should be nominated and should then decline, the convention would then name another, but probably not Mr. Curtis. There may be a repetition of 1924 when Dawes was nominated after Frank O. Lowden had been nominated for vice president and had declined.

Others being discussed for the Vice Presidency in the event that Gen. Dawes declines are young Teddy Roosevelt, new governor general of the Philippines; "Wild Bill" Donovan of New York, the Roman Catholic whom Mr. Hoover refused to make attorney general, and former Gov. Alvin T. Fuller of Massachusetts.

Sanders Leads for Chairman.

For chairman of the Republican national committee Everett Sanders of Indiana, former congressman and secretary to President Coolidge, is now a ruling favorite, with James R. Garfield of Ohio still figuring as a possibility, however. William M. Butler of Massachusetts was eliminated from consideration of this post when he was defeated for national committeeman in the Massachusetts delegation caucus in the afternoon.

The cabinet group participating in the discussion was split on the vexed question of prohibition before the final draft was made for Hoover's approval. Secretary of the Interior Ray Lyman Wilbur and Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde were in favor of a vague declaration in which the words "repeal" and "modification" would not appear and the party would be committed merely to the submission of a "constructive" substitute for the eighteenth amendment.

Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills and Postmaster General Walter F. Brown were in favor of going much farther in the direction of satisfying the demands of the wets.

Administration Gains Weight.

The influence of the administration in the resolutions committee was strengthened by the selection of Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley by the Oklahoma delegation and of Secretary Hyde of the Missouri delegation for places on the platform framing body. With Secretary Mills on the committee representing New York there will be three cabinet members taking an important part in the drafting of the platform.

The platform committee will be appointed at the session today and immediately thereafter will begin holding hearings of the arguments to be presented by individuals and groups for and against all the declarations of principle it is proposed to incorporate in the party creed. After the conclusion of the hearings the committee will go into executive session to write the platform which it is planned to have ready for a night session of the convention tomorrow.

Predict Exciting Night Session.

With the advocates of repeal intending to carry their fight to the floor of the convention in the event the resolutions committee rejects their plank, and hoping to stampede the delegates to acceptance of their proposal, the night session tomorrow bids fair to be the most exciting of all.

The Hoover high command on the field of battle spent almost the entire day behind closed doors debating the prohibition plank, surveying the strength of the repeal and resubmission factions and discussing the vice presidential nomination.

A direct telephone wire to the White House kept the high command in constant touch with Mr. Hoover, to whom reports of the situation were made and from whom instructions were received. Thus, upon the basis of the reports brought in by scouts who visited arriving delegations, Mr Hoover was informed by his board of strategy that the sentiment for unqualified repeal turns out to be far less extensive than has been claimed by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler and other extreme wets.

One estimate that percolated from the conference of the Hoover lieutenants was that the delegates are about 90 per cent for a resubmission plank, and only 10 per cent for a declaration committing the party to repeal. Dr. Butler, however, reiterated his assertion that 640 delegates, constituting a majority of the convention, are in favor of repeal.

Dr. Butler Stands Pat.

Secretary Mills, who has been elected New York member of the resolutions committee, said during the day that he would submit to the committee the repeal plank indorsed by the delegation, but that he does not feel bound by the action of the delegation to support it. This did not please some members of the delegation, who suggested that Mr. Mills ought to step aside if he does not feel he can conscientiously carry out the will of his delegation.

If he were to step aside, however, his place on the resolutions committee would be taken by Dr. Butler, arch-advocate of repeal, who then would be qualified to carry a minority report proposing repeal to the convention floor and endeavor to stampede the delegates. This the administration is intent upon preventing at all costs and Mr. Mills, much as he personally favors repeal, is stolidly blocking the doorway to keep Dr. Butler from getting through.

The drys put in another unhappy day on the outskirts of the party headquarters at the Congress hotel. The Rev. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, conceded that the plank adopted by the convention will not fall short of resubmission.

"In some ways," he said, "resubmission is worse than repeal. Resubmission is simply passing the buck. Those who advocate it lack the courage for a straight clear cut fight. The party won in 1928 without a plank it should beware losing in 1932 with one."

Dr. McBride was fresh from the massmeeting of drys which telegraphed Mr. Hoover "to give heed to our solemn purpose to maintain prohibition as a perpetual institution of our fundamental federal law."

Mrs. Gann Seems Confident.

Opposition to the renomination of Vice President Curtis became more noticeable as the number of delegates on the scene increased. The objections heard were mainly that at the age of 73, which Mr. Curtis will be at the beginning of the next administration, he will be too old for a position from which he might be called to assume the burden of the presidency and that he is too colorless a personality to meet the demands for strengthening the ticket in the approaching campaign.

Mrs. Dolly Gann, the Vice President's sister, who has been making Republican campaign speeches with her expenses partly paid by the Republican national committee, was at headquarters in the afternoon, asserting that the renomination of her brother is assured.

The administration forces were going through the motions of supporting the renomination of Mr. Curtis but there is reason to believe that the Hoover men have no intention of going into the last ditch with the Vice President. One of the Hoover lieutenants intimated that while they will vote for Mr. Curtis on the nomination roll call they are not going into any battle for him and "get splattered with blood," the telltale stains of which would not make for harmony with the eventual nominee if the convention should throw Mr. Curtis over board.

One of the leaders of the Curtis camp became extremely indignant over what he considered the lukewarmness of the administration to the renomination of the Vice President. He said that Mr. Hoover had prevailed on Mr Curtis to become a candidate for renomination, using the argument that if Mr. Curtis were to run instead for senator from Kansas the public impression would be created that Mr. Curtis judged the reelection of Mr Hoover hopeless. Mr. Curtis yielded, hence it is incumbent upon the President to go the limit in behalf of Mr Curtis now, this spokesman held.

A Different Version.

This version is at variance with the prevailing understanding among politicians, which is that Mr. Curtis decided not to run for senator from Kansas because he found on his survey last year that the Democrats are likely to carry Kansas in November.

From an administration source came the assertion that Mr. Hoover had nothing to do with Mr. Curtis' decision. In fact, Mr. Hoover according to this version, was greatly worried about what he was going to say to Mr. Curtis when the Vice President should return from his Kansas survey and should call at the White House to find out if the President wanted him again as his running mate.

The fact was that Mr. Hoover preferred another running mate and was going to be greatly embarrassed when Mr. Curtis should broach the question. The President, however, was spared such embarrassment when Mr. Curtis announced, without consulting Mr. Hoover, that he would seek renomination. Hence administration leaders deny that the President is under any obligation to fight for Mr. Curtis.

delphia came a wire from William S. Vare, who swung the tide towards Hoover at Kansas City in 1928, demanding that the delegation stand by Vare's proposal for a dripping wet plank.

All groups—wets, drys, moists, and damps—are represented on the delegation. James M. Hazlett of Philadelphia, spokesman for Vare, is for a sopping wet plank. Samuel Harden Church, president of Carnegie institute, has a plank for submission of repeal, which denounces prohibition as a failure and commits the party to a declaration for repeal.

Vare being ill at home and Andrew W. Mellon being at the court of St. James as American ambassador things were not running so smoothly. A committee was picked to draft a proposal for Pennsylvania, but it will not be ready to report until today according to leading delegates.

Texas Adds to Revolt Fears.

Utah and Texas added to the fear of administration leaders of a runaway convention on prohibition in case the resolutions committee stops short of a nonstraddling plank.

In the caucus of delegates from Texas, which recently veered to the wet side, R. B. Creager, national committeeman, said he favored submission of prohibition to the people.

Utah put William J. Lowe on the platform committee and he announced that most of his state's delegates favor a submission proposal, while others go so far as to urge a plank putting the party on record as for repeal itself.

Kentucky's caucus left the gate wide open for each of its delegates to vote as he pleases if repeal goes to the convention floor. Idaho voted to "follow Borah."

Oregon Adds Its Efforts.

The Oregon delegation in its caucus added its efforts to write a liberalized plank on the platform and instructed Stanley Myers, its resolutions committee member, to work in behalf of resubmission but against the open saloon.

Secretary of Agriculture Arthur Hyde, who was put on the platform committee by the Missouri delegation, announced that he favors a resubmission plank. Charles Nagel of St. Louis, former secretary of labor and commerce, asked for indorsement of the New York plank for submission of repeal but he was turned down.

Most of the St. Louis delegates voted for Nagel and his plank for the resolutions committee. From the St. Louis delegates came a protest that St. Louis, normally heavily Republican, "would go overwhelmingly Democratic unless we get wet." The delegation finally ratified the idea of its state convention calling for a national convention to deal with prohibition.

South Dakota Deadlocked.

South Dakota deadlocked over prohibition. Congressman Royal C. Johnson, an avowed anti-prohibitionist, and L. W. Robinson, a dry, were tied for member of the resolutions committee and selection was deferred until today. Three delegates were absent.

The Nebraska caucus put Sam R. McKelvie, former governor and former member of the federal farm board, on the resolutions committee. He was instructed to take a dry stand on the prohibition plank. Adam McMullen, another former governor, who was impresario of the "march of the 100,000 embattled farmers" to Kansas City four years ago in which only 1,000 showed up, was defeated by McKelvie. McMullen is for an equalization fee plank.

Massachusetts, which went wet in its primaries, took no action on prohibition in its caucus, due to the withdrawal of William M. Butler, who was defeated for national committeeman by John Richardson, Hoover leader in Massachusetts four years ago. Butler, who is a former senator and ex-national chairman during the Coolidge regime, left the room, visibly affected after his defeat. He was, however, chosen for the platform committee. He is a former dry who came out for resubmission.

Ohio will caucus today. Indications are the delegates will follow the White House, as interpreted by Postmaster General Walter Brown. In its primaries the home state of the Anti-Saloon league defeated league candidates. The delegates include repealists, resubmissionists, and bone drys. Senator Simeon D. Fess, dry national chairman, said the delegation will be its own master.

Garfield Heads Committee.

As to whether the bosses will control, a Hoover man, James R. Garfield of Ohio, is chairman designate of the platform committee, and three cabinet officers are members—Secretary Hyde, Secretary Hurley, and Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills from New York.

On the other side Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut, a state which never ratified the 18th amendment, said he would insist on a roll call that the Republican party declare itself in favor of repeal as well as of submission of repeal. Bingham was dissatisfied with the New York submission plank. He will be on the resolutions committee.

"It is a cleverly worded suggestion which amounts only to submission," he said. "I want the convention to declare itself in favor of repeal as well as for submission of repeal to the states."

Tentative Outline of Platform.

Party leaders who participated in the day's struggle said indications were the platform will include among other things the following:

1. For submission of the prohibition question by congress to the states in some form or other, a proposal for repeal or modification of the eighteenth amendment—the degree of wetness being the great controversial point.
2. Indorses the Hoover administration.
3. For sound money and adherence to the gold standard.
4. For economy in government.
5. For the protective tariff as a fundamental and essential principle.
6. Against cancellation of foreign debts.
7. Approves foreign policies of Hoover.
8. For the federal farm act in strengthened form, as to handling of surplus.
9. A declaration as to public utilities, probably favoring state regulation.
10. For inland and intra-coastal waterways.
11. For development of aviation.
14. For Philippine independence—in proper time.

Secretaries Bring Planks.

Cabinet members had various planks. Secretary of State Stimson had the planks on foreign affairs, Secretary of the Treasury Mills a bundle on the economic issues. Stimson indicated he will put up a fight for indorsement of American adherence to the world court.

A sound money declaration is set for incorporation well up in the front of the platform, including a proposed utterance of adherence to the gold standard. Western delegates have picked a group to bring the silver question before the platform committee. They want a plank urging an international conference to consider making silver a primary money.

Silver Plank Is Urged.

A committee embracing Charles D. Hilles of New York, W. Mont Ferry of Salt Lake City, I. E. Rockwell of Idaho, Mrs. Jeanette A. Morrell of Ogden, Utah; Col. Henry W. Anderson of Virginia, Mrs. W. C. Reed of New Mexico and Pat Sullivan of Wyoming was selected to present the following proposed silver plank as representing opinion in the silver states:

"More than one thousand million people, half of the world's population, have always used, and will doubtless continue to use, silver as their exclusive money metal and hence the foreign trade of the United States with these countries is dependent upon the buying power of silver.

"Therefore the Republican party strongly favoring sound money based on metal as against fiat money which merely expands and weakens our credit structure, asserts its belief in silver and pledges itself to an international consideration of the restoration of silver as a primary money in order to broaden the metallic credit base and strengthen and stabilize the gold standard; and, furthermore, approves such legislation as is practical to further the foregoing declarations."

Organized labor prepared to lay before the platform committee a group of proposed labor planks. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, arrived yesterday. With him came James O'Connell and T. A. Rickert, vice presidents, and Martin F. Ryan, secretary of the federation. A conference of 75 union heads is to be held tonight at the Palmer house to formulate planks to be advanced before the committee.

Mr. Green is for a declaration for light wines and beer. Among other planks he may urge are declarations for unemployment relief measures, reduction of the hours of labor for workmen, and adoption of the five day week.

As to a declaration for "party regularity," many of the party platformers are urging it with a view to disciplining some of the "sons of the wild jackass." They dwell upon a turn in some of the states against "wild jackassism" as indicated by the defeat in Iowa of Senator Smith Wildman Brookhart, and they theorize it might aid in the Wisconsin battle against Senator John J. Blaine.

MRS. SIMMS IN SPOTLIGHT AT WOMEN'S SHOW

And Bridegroom Makes a Decided Hit.

By GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

Ruth McCormick Simms, minus a vote in Illinois, plus a husband in New Mexico [and don't try to tell me she isn't enthusiastic over the equation] went yesterday as an innocent bystander to the luncheon of the Illinois Republican Women's club and tarried long enough to steal the show from the regulars. Which only goes to prove what I've been trying to say all along, that Cupid can push that G. O. P. elephant right off the road, in spite of the nineteenth amendment.

What with Albert Gallatin Simms, the beaming bridegroom, saying hello, and with Mrs. Simms praising New Mexico men for being so nice to women [politically, of course], it was quite a festival. And the women loved it.

Mrs. Simms was saying some serious things about the necessity of women beginning to demand their political recognition back in the precinct organizations, when she grew autobiographical.

Husband Found at Meeting.

"One man," she phrased it, "'sn't afraid of working with one woman in the community political organization. But when he thinks of women he's in a panic. I don't want to get personal, but I wanted my own husband to come here and meet you women, but he ducked."

"No, he didn't; he's here," trilled an ecstatic lady who had spied Mr. Simms back in the corner.

"He's here," caroled a couple of other ladies.

The speaker halted her address.

Husband Makes a Speech.

When the murmurs of excitement had died down, Mr. Simms said that many years ago the men in his state had decided to admit women into equal partnership. The plan had worked excellently, he guaranteed, and bowed at his bride.

Then, with a complete gesture of gallantry, he refused to take a seat at the speakers' table, but squatted down on the floor behind the palms. Naturally, it was some little time before the women could turn their thoughts once more to platforms and policies.

Then they heard Mrs. Simms reaffirm that she is a personal dry, but declare that she is for resubmission.

"I am as dry today as I ever was," she said, "but as a dry I will have to admit that I may not be right, not always right, I mean. If we believe in our form of government, all of us ought to admit the necessity of permitting resubmission of this prohibition question. Only, don't let's do it in a presidential year. Let's have it in an off year election and take it out of politics."

Submit and forget is the slogan she would favor.

Women Told to Work.

Stripping feminine progress talk of its platitudes, she told the women that they really didn't have "more than a corporal's guard of delegates at this convention." Frankly, she predicted they'd never have more than a corporal's guard, unless they got to work back home, in the precinct, and came on, gradually, but inevitably, to adequate representation at national political gatherings.

Of specific candidates, she said, "it doesn't make a great deal of difference whether Herbert Hoover, Al Smith or John Jones is elected President, but it makes a tremendous difference what platforms and policies are adopted by the party.

In this statement she was somewhat at variance with Mrs. Ellis Yost, director of the women's division of the Republican party, who had spoken earlier. Mrs. Yost, herself a determined dry, has said, somewhat significantly:

"Mr. Hoover has not changed in principal or practice since 1928 and in the election of 1932 the women will show that they have not deserted their standard bearer."

Her Position in Danger.

Mrs. Yost's reference to the wet and dry question was listened to with particular attention, since she is herself in the midst of a battle to retain her position as national committee woman from West Virginia, a battle which may have a basis in the prohibition issue.

Walter Hallanan, West Virginia's committeeman, is leading a surprise attack on Mrs. Yost, who has served the Republican party long in West Virginia. Mr. Hallanan wants a Mrs. Cora Ebberts for the job. Senator Hatfield, one of the leading drys in the senate, is standing by Mrs. Yost.

So is Allen Property Custodian Howard Sutherland, and West Virginia's governor.

Many of her friends and of her opposition say it's not liquor but location that's the cause of the trouble. Mrs. Yost, they point out, spends much of her time in Washington.

JOHN N. WILLYS SAYS DRY LAW IS RUINING NATION

New York, June 13.—[Special.]—After having been United States ambassador to Poland for two and a half years, John N. Willys returned today to resume his duties as chairman of the board of Willys-Overland company of Toledo, O.

Mr. Willys said he felt the eighteenth amendment had failed in purpose and must be repealed.

"Congress should be guided," said the retiring ambassador, "by the will of the people, which now points to modification of the dry law. The people of each state should be permitted to determine whether they want prohibition or not.

"This country will go to wrack and ruin if it is not changed," he continued, "and changed soon. We are spending $500,000,000 a year to enforce a law that nobody will obey. It is undermining the structure of the government and promoting crime."

WOMEN VOTERS URGE 3 PLANKS ON CONVENTION

Assail Men's Idea of Gain in Politics.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

Masculine vanity was saved from severe laceration yesterday only because no men were within sound of the voice of Miss Marguerite Wells of Minneapolis, addressing a large luncheon at the Casino club. The luncheon was given by the National League of Women Voters for women delegates and vistors to the Republican convention.

As head of the delegation that will present the league's three bipartisan planks to the convention, Miss Wells spoke from experience in the capital and the hinterland, and spared no terms in her appraisal of the shortcomings of men.

"Our political leaders are apt to blame all our political ills on the apathy of the voter," she declared. "I do not believe the public is as much at fault as claimed. People don't vote because they ought to, but because they want to. Political leaders of the past have not given them anything they want to vote about.

"I believe that women are much nearer knowing how to conduct politics than men are.

"I do not believe we ought to send our bankers and business men into politics as congressmen and governors. I don't believe they know as much about how to handle politics to obtain the best results as the men now in Washington.

"Two things seem hopeful to me. One is that people are looking to Washington as they have never looked before. The other—I say it sincerely—is the League of Women Voters.

"Our three planks, urging government economy, federal relief, and international coöperation, are threadbare topics, but they are of the fabric that weaves security for our nation. Behind them is the solid backing of an organization that has studied for twelve years what goes into them."

Mrs. Arthur Hyde, wife of the secretary of agriculture.

Among those present were Mrs. Henry S. Caulfield, wife of the governor of Missouri; Mrs. Marjorie Wright of Long Island, alternate for Secretary of State Stimson; Mrs. James W. Morrison of Groton, Conn., formerly of Chicago; Mrs. William Gold Hibbard; Mrs. Clair More; Mrs. Ralph Treadway, head of the Illinois branch of the league; Mrs. Quincy Wright, head of the Cook county league; Mrs. Virgil Loeb of St. Louis; Mrs. Edwin Shelden of San Francisco and Mrs. Peyton Conway March of Washington, D. C., wife of Gen. March.

DARLING DEFEATS IOWA GOVERNOR FOR COMMITTEE

Gov. Dan Turner of Iowa, a dry, was defeated for a place on the convention platform committee last night by J. N. [Ding] Darling, Des Moines cartoonist, a liberal. The Iowa caucus, held at the Morrison hotel, also voted to support Charles G. Dawes for President Hoover's running mate in place of Vice President Curtis.

The caucus lasted almost two hours and witnessed a bitter fight to elect Darling to the platform committee in place of the governor. One of Darling's supporters was the mayor of Ottumwa, E. W. Manning, who was chosen chairman of the delegation. Mr. Manning was Hoover's preconvention manager in Iowa.

Clyde Charlton of Des Moines was named to the credentials committee, John McCoy of Oskaloosa to the committee on permanent organization, and R. F. Clough of Mason City to the rules committee. Iowa will have 25 votes in the convention.

STABBED IN STREET DISPUTE.

Howard Torbiason, 39 years old, 1945 North Richmond street, was stabbed yesterday during a dispute with an unidentified Mexican in the 800 block on Washington boulevard. The Mexican, it is believed, asked alms of Torbiason.

WISCONSIN WILL FIGHT FOR G. O. P. REPEAL PLANK

Wisconsin's delegates to the Republican convention, standing unanimously for repeal of the 18th amendment, last night appointed a committee to present a resolution to that effect to the committee on resolutions.

The members of the special committee are William F. Kinsella, Milwaukee; H. T. Greene, Genesee Depot, and George W. Meade, Wisconsin Rapids.

The officials elected at the Wisconsin caucus last night are Harry Dahl, La Crosse, chairman; C. C. Nelson, Appleton, secretary; Col. Frank Schneller, Neenah, committee on credentials; Charles Dittman, La Crosse, committee on permanent organization; Frank J. Bentley, Madison, committee on rules; Ben Marcus, Muscoda, committee on resolutions; Frank Klode, Whitefish Bay, honorary vice president of the convention; George W. Mead, Wisconsin Rapids, committee to notify candidate for President, and George W. Anderson, Kenosha, committee to notify candidate for Vice President.

The conservatives were in full control of the caucus, having 16 votes to 9 for the La Follette wing.

MRS. GANN HERE TO BATTLE FOR BROTHER CHARLES

No Fight on Curtis, She Declares.

By GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

Dolly Gann is going to fight for Brother Charlie Curtis' seat at the political right hand of the President just as hard as she has fought for her own seat at the social right hand of the President.

She stepped off the train yesterday morning and into the white light of one big question mark: "Are you going to fight for the renomination of Mr. Curtis as vice president?"

"Of course! That's my business." With those five words she outlined her campaign.

Then she explained.

Curtis Deserves Renomination.

"Brother deserves the renomination. And everybody in the country knows it. Why, I've been all over. Well, not all over, but as far west as Omaha and they're all for him. There's nothing to all this talk; absolutely nothing to it."

Then they wanted to know if she had brought along a message from Mr. Hoover, ammunition for her battle.

"The President," she rebuked sternly, "speaks for himself."

But there was a pretty substantial report that she went over to see Walter Newton, one of the presidential secretaries here on the job.

Mrs. Gann Not at Party.

Maybe that's where she was when the Illinois women were giving their big luncheon, when Mrs. Ellis Yost, head of the Women's division of the National G. O. P., was making a hip hip-hurray Hoover speech. Anyway, she wasn't at the party.

Later in the day she went over to the women's headquarters and held quite a large reception. She's willing to make a speech, she said, whenever "they" want her to. The first speech she knows she's going to make is in Newport on June 24. Today there's a big Republican rally, but there seems to be a bit of confusion as to whether or not she'll be there, let alone, talk.

Mrs. Bertha Baur, Illinois' committeewoman, is in doubt about the appearance of the Vice President's sister. Mrs. Gann herself explained that she had at first declined the invitation because she hadn't expected to be here. And so it's all up in the air right now.

Mrs. Longworth Silent.

While Mrs. Gann was declaring she'd talk anywhere, another arrival of the day, Alice Roosevelt Longworth, was declaring she wouldn't say a word, not for publication.

She dismissed with gestures if not with words the flurry of speculation that she might be interested, at least mildly, in the newest Gann campaign.

The only thing Mrs. Longworth, who could say much about many things, would say was that she had attended her first convention in Chicago 28 years ago. She remembers it particularly well because that was the convention that nominated her father. She's been at every convention since then; been interviewed at none of them.

Overcome by Car Exhaust, Boy Falls on Horn; Saved

Waynesburg, Pa., June 13. — [Special.]—Thomas Parkinson, aged 17, was overcome by carbon-monoxide while seated in his father's automobile in a garage today. While unconscious he fell forward on the horn, which blew incessantly until neighbors came to the rescue and saved the youth.

H. W. MARSHALL HOOSIER PICK ON COMMITTEE

Henry W. Marshall, Lafayette publisher, was named Indiana's member of the convention resolutions committee at the delegation caucus last night. The Hoosier state thus went formally on record as wet, for Marshall wrote the liberal prohibition plank adopted by the state convention at Indianapolis last week.

All places on the committees were without contest under the engineering of Will Hays, the movie czar, a delegate at large, and Harold Van Orman, former lieutenant governor, another delegate. Hays was active at the caucus which was an open meeting.

The present members of the national committee—Miss Dorothy Cunningham of Martinsville and George A. Ball of Muncie—were sent back to the committee for another four years. Gov. Harry G. Leslie was named chairman of the delegation, although he was absent from the caucus. He is expected tonight.

DRY AGENTS WON'T MOLEST DRINKERS IN ROOMS AT HOTELS

Delegates and visitors to the Republican convention so inclined may drink in their hotel rooms without fear of interruption from prohibition agents, Deputy Prohibition Administrator A. E. Hamilton said yesterday that a hotel room has the same sanctity as the home. For this reason, agents will confine their activities to arresting bootleggers making deliveries, he said.

"We are primarily after those who commercialize the liquor industry," he said. "This is in keeping with the wishes of Amos Woodcock, national director of enforcement."

8,000 CHEER WAR TO FINISH ON PROHIBITION

Leaders Demand Action to Stop National Ruin.

the best interests of the people in what they do in Chicago this month then most salutary results will flow from the building of platforms and the naming of candidates. It is fitting that such changes should be initiated here because for many a weary year of the twelve years of prohibition Chicago alone refused to cover up the inequities of prohibition. We exposed them to the light of day. We did not shirk. Now that the country has been converted to the cause of real temperance, no city is more deserving of having the new faith proclaimed in its midst than is Chicago.

"But, to politicians, to platform builders, we say, 'Let it be the new faith and not a half hearted promise of resubmission in order to catch votes from the broken down citadel of fanatics. The party that fails to heed our honest demand for honest measures is doomed to utter failure.

"Let the politicians take example from you, for you are crusaders indeed in the cause of liberating your fellow men from the madhouse in which the Anti-Saloon league has tried to confine us."

A Prayer for Liberty.

Then the people bowed their heads during the solemn prayer by the Rev. Herbert J. Brodt of Chicago who, voicing the earnest, decorous spirit of the meeting said:

"Thou knowest, O, Lord, that there is not one connected with this movement for true temperance who would condone or encourage intemperance." He prayed for liberty, for a decent respect to personal dignity, and, as a text to inspire crusaders, he gave them a verse from the New Testament: "Let no man therefore judge you in meat or in drink."

The people were eager to hear Dr. Butler and in response to cordial calls for him his place on the program was advanced.

Responsibility On Leaders.

"My message to this great and representative audience," said the president of Columbia, "can be briefly put.

"The national convention of one of the great parties which will assemble tomorrow and the national convention of the other great party which will meet in this city two weeks hence have in their hands the responsibility for the good order, the prosperity, and the happiness of the American people. It is an opportunity not equaled for anyone in the lifetime of any person within the sound of my voice.

"Public opinion in the United States is practically unanimous in demanding that an end be put to that condition which has wrought the greatest evil in this country for many a year.

Condemns Cunning Devices.

"This cannot be done by cunning devices which some would propose to have adopted so that we might appear to do something while doing nothing at all. They talk of resubmission—there is nothing in the constitution about resubmission. You cannot resubmit the Supreme court, you cannot resubmit the Bill of Rights.

"The alternative is simple and direct.

"These two conventions should insist that the congress of the United States should submit without delay to the several states a proposal for the repeal of the 18th amendment, this proposal to be acted upon by the states through conventions of the people elected for this purpose.

"Such a step would take the entire matter out of politics, away from the election of senators and representatives, and into the light of day where people of each state may decide for themselves."

Woman Charms Audience.

Mrs. Sabin, who for three years has led in battle but kept her temper and her poise, charmed the audience as completely as she convinced it, and she paid it the compliment of dressing for it not as a reformer of the gloomy old tradition but as a woman of grace and taste. But her recognition of the amenities did not make her rebukes of devious politics less withering than were blunt Mayor Cermak's.

"We women," she said, "shall have our opinion of the convention which hedges, which balances a wet plank against a dry candidate, or a wet candidate against a dry running mate. We shall have our opinion of the candidate whose conversion to the cause of repeal is so recent that he may be seen changing his coat as he runs to the convention—for that is obviously a change of clothing and not a change of heart."

A shout of laughter rewarded Mrs. Sabin's picture of that sartorial lightning change act, but the lady wanted listening more than laughter. She lifted an appealing hand and in tones that carried clear across the Coliseum she cried:

"But do not misunderstand me!"

Converted from Prohibition.

Laughter died away. Again there was strict attention and amid it Mrs. Sabin, herself a convert from prohibition, affirmed her belief in the validity of conversion.

"We women," she said, "do not doubt the possibility of honest conversion to an honest cause. Without such conversion mankind would have made little progress out of the darkness of error. I am a convert. Hundreds of thousands of my fellow members are converts from a belief—or at least a hope—that national prohibition would bring about a better social day, a day of less temptation for the young, a day of greater security for the workers, a day of better life for us all. But the unescapable logic of facts converted us."

Again cheers, again the uplifted hand, and again silence amid which Mrs. Sabin uttered these, her closing words:

"We believe in conversions and welcome them, but we shall know how to evaluate the conversion of candidates who have supported this evil thing called prohibition until the eleventh hour, and who now for the sake of political expediency change their colors and their clothes.

"On this we stand."

Woll Speaks for Labor.

Speaking for labor, Matthew Woll, vice president of the Federation of Labor, gave the meeting these ringing sentences:

"American labor, organized and as well as unorganized, holds that by national prohibition we have substituted force for reason, penalties for persuasion, cruelties for charity.

"Our task is clear! We must resume our education in temperance. But let us make no mistake. The education of the citizen can be achieved voluntarily but not by compulsion. Therein lies the fatal mistake in the policy of the last decade. We can, as a people, achieve true freedom only through education. We can keep the republic safe only as we make the voluntary education of the citizenship the corner stone of the edifice."

The Republican Revolt.

Mr. Pitcairn, the Philadelphian who originated the idea of making the Republican managers take heed of demands for repeal by organizing a strike of Republican contributors to the party's war chest, said that the strikers had not come to Chicago to impose their will on free delegates but to resist minority rule of the delegates. If the delegates consented to be ruled by a minority, he proposed that rebel Republicans and enlightened Democrats unite on Alfred E. Smith as their "leader in the people's cause." [Cheers.]

War on Oligarchy.

In his plea for a bold stand on repeal by both parties, National Commander Clark of the Crusaders said:

"We cannot enjoy either law or order so long as we have within our portals a criminal oligarchy that has purchased through its criminally gained wealth protection from our local, state and national enforcement officials."

HUNDREDS OF AUTOISTS JOIN IN REPEAL PARADE

PARADE ON BOULEVARD

Thousands of flag and banner draped floats moved down Michigan avenue in the parade which preceded the massmeeting in the Coliseum. The pageant of protest against the abuses of prohibition began at Ohio street and passed the reviewing stand at 16th street where the participants left for the massmeeting.

PROHIBITION: SETTLE IT IN 1932.

Thousands of spectators along both sides of the boulevard cheered as the evils of the prohibition era were depicted by the passing tableaus. The purpose of the parade was to impress upon delegates to the Republican national convention that the people are growing more solid each day in a demand for repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

Spectators Are Enthusiastic.

Raymond Pitcairn, organizer of the Republican Citizens' committee, said the enthusiasm of the spectators, comprising not only Chicagoans, but delegates from all parts of the country, confirmed his statement made earlier in the day that only President Hoover's restraining influence is preventing an explosion of repeal sentiment in all the state delegations.

The most amusing feature of the double column motorcade from the standpoint of the spectators was the Literary Digest contingent of 49 cars, one for each state and the District of Columbia, with banners showing how they voted in the 3 to 1 wet poll.

A dilapidated little car, but still able to get along under its own power, was next to the end, representing North Carolina, one of the two dry states. A banner explained that this state is seeing the light as it grows up, a gesture to the defeat of the dry Senator Morrison by Robert R. Reynolds, a wet.

At the end was the Kansas car, so completely a wreck that it had to be conveyed on a truck. Kansas was the other dry state in the poll, and the banners on its car were expressive of no hope.

An escort of police, headed by Commissioner John P. Allman, headed the line of march. Next came the reviewing officer, Fred G. Clark, commander in chief of the Crusaders, and his staff. The honorary escort to the reviewing officer included Mayor Cermak, members of the city council, and other public officials.

Brig. Gen. John V. Clinnin, grand marshal of the parade, and his aides came next, and the Board of Trade post, American Legion band followed. Many of the automobiles and floats were from out of the city, including those sent by the Crusaders from St. Louis and Iowa. The American Federation of Labor spent more than $1,000 on its float.

CONVENTION TO AVOID RAISING COLOR LINE ISSUE

Routine approval of the decisions of the national committee, on the delegate contests from southern states, is the program that faces the Republican convention committee on credentials at its late afternoon meeting today.

Well informed sources, believed in touch with the White House, whispered yesterday that there is no thought among the administration forces of unseating the Howard delegation from Mississippi and the Tolbert delegation from South Carolina, which were awarded the decisions of the national committee last week and will be included in the temporary roll call this morning.

Dread of raising the color line issue was said to be partly the cause of this attitude toward these contests. The administration delegates won the other two contests in Louisiana and Georgia.

Texas Democrats to Vote on Prohibition in July

Austin, Tex., June 13.—(AP)—The Texas state Democratic executive committee decided today to submit the question of repeal of the eighteenth amendment to a referendum of voters participating in the July party primaries. The vote was 16 to 13.

Women's Message Calls on Hoover to Fight Repeal.

about the leading wets of both political parties.

"To the gallows with these Benedict Arnolds," she cried. "We have reached the last ditch. Our country must be rid of these outlaw gangsters, whether they be found in a governor's chair, an ambassador's home, on a rum runner's yacht, on a judge's bench, in a state's attorney's office, in a university presidency, or in a mayor's beer parade."

The crowd was at the frenzy stage when Harry Eugene Kelly, former president of the Union League club and now allied with the Business Men's Prohibition foundation, stepped up with a proposal that the dry blast be turned full on Washington via the telegraph wires.

Drafts Message to Hoover.

Promptly Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, the Bostonian who quit the state of Massachusetts and organized the committee for law enforcement when the Bay state repealed its prohibition law, dashed off a telegram to President Hoover. The text was as follows:

"Mr. President: Twenty-seven hundred women, assembled at a loyalty luncheon of the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement representing approximately twelve million voting women, ask you to give heed to our solemn purpose to preserve prohibition as a perpetual institution of our fundamental law."

Lest this message be insufficiently explicit, Mrs. Peabody tacked on the text of a resolution adopted by the women at the outset of the meeting. The substance of the resolution is as follows:

"We oppose repeal of the 18th amendment. We oppose the modification of the 18th amendment.

Dry Stand on Resubmission.

"We do not approve of the resubmission of the 18th amendment, except through constitutional means.

"Only when congress has voted by a two-thirds majority and three-fourths of the states have ratified the action can we believe the people desire this law repealed.

"We cannot accept any recommendation by either party to present a dry candidate for President or Vice President on a wet platform.

"We could not trust the sincerity of any candidate willing to lend himself to such a plan."

Professional press agents for the dry forces had been complaining rather ruefully up to yesterday that their bosses lacked vocal power. The loyalty luncheon speakers, however, were not merely vocal, but vociferous.

Mrs. Jesse W. Nicholson of Chevy Chase, Md., was called upon to express the committee's view towards the Democratic candidates. She lashed the whole roster of contenders up and down, dismissing all except Gov. Harry Byrd of Virginia and William Gibbs McAdoo of California as hopeless.

ILLINOIS GROUP DEADLOCKED ON COMMITTEEMAN

Frank L. Smith Is Ahead with 27½ Votes.

BY PARKE BROWN.

The Illinois delegation to the Republican national convention, unable to select a national committeeman after twenty-four ballots, adjourned its caucus in the Stevens hotel shortly after midnight and will re-assemble this morning at 9:30 a. m. to make another attempt at a choice.

On the last ballot Frank L. Smith of Dwight, campaign manager of Len Small, G. O. P. nominee for governor, had 27½ votes; Gov. Emmerson 23 votes; Roy O. West, present national committeeman, 8½, and George F. Harding 1 vote. There had been practically no change in the lineup since the first ballot. Thirty-one votes are needed for a choice.

On the motion for a recess until this morning some of the Small-Smith delegates averred a desire to fight the matter out all night. The Emmerson-Harding forces forced the adjournment, 36 to 23½, aided by a few Small delegates.

Mrs. Baur Reelected.

There was no opposition to the reelection of Mrs. Bertha Baur for national committeewoman, a unanimous vote being recorded for her after former Gov. Small had nominated her.

Seventy-two delegates compose the Illinois representation in the convention. Fifty are from the congressional districts and twenty-two others have half a vote each, making the voting strength sixty-one.

At the opening of the caucus Gen. Abel Davis was elected chairman, National Committeeman West being ineligible to serve, not being a delegate. The first motion, made by Attorney General Carlstrom, was that the meeting be opened to the press. This was defeated, 36 to 28, the Emmerson forces furnishing the bulk of the opposition. Mr. Carlstrom's motion was seconded by George F. Barrett and opposed by Omer N. Custer, defeated candidate for the nomination for governor.

Cousin Votes for Harding.

The sole vote for Harding for committeeman, cast on all ballots, came from his cousin, Everett Hardin, a Monmouth banker.

Pending a decision on this contest, the nomination of members of the convention committees was delayed. There was some prospect, it was pointed out, that the attempt to choose a national committeeman would have to be delayed. It is not necessary to name him at once, while the committee members must be reported to the convention at the opening session this morning.

Likewise the choice of a chairman of the delegation was still to be taken up after midnight. There were suggestions that former Vice President Dawes or Senator Glenn would be acceptable to all factions, but late reports were that they were out of the city and would be in Washington when the time for a delegation chairman to function arrives.

A Dripping Wet Plank.

Before the caucus it was freely predicted that the delegation would agree to urge on the convention a prohibition plank exactly like that adopted by the state Republican convention on May 27. The plank read:

"We declare for the repeal of the 18th amendment. Pending such repeal, we declare for modification of the Volstead act to permit the sale of beer and light wines; we declare for the repeal of the Illinois search and seizure and prohibition laws."

That part of this plank referring to the state law will, of course, be omitted from the resolution to be offered by Illinois, but attention was called to the complete text to show how extremely anti-prohibition Republicanism is in Illinois.

LEADERS IN MANY FIELDS HONOR SECRETARY DOAK

Both Parties Represented at Luncheon.

Railroad president and labor union official, Republican and Democrat, business leader and office holder attended a luncheon in the Palmer house yesterday in honor of Secretary of Labor William N. Doak. All of the fifty men present were noted in their fields.

The speeches were all extemporaneous. There were some humorous references to the varying political faiths of those present and some serious talk about the economic distress of the country.

WILLIAM GREEN.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, received applause when he declared:

"I think all of us have faith in the industries of this country. We will pull through; there is no doubt of that. I am proud of the record of labor during the depression. The men and women of labor have shown a spirit and self-control during these times of suffering that they and the country can well be proud of."

H. A. Scandrett, president of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad, followed with a tribute to Secretary Doak, an old acquaintance.

Rufus Dawes, president of the Century of Progress exposition, declared that Chicago had shown its faith in the future by going steadily ahead with plans for the 1933 World's Fair. Mayor Cermak spoke on the comforts which Chicago has to offer to the visitors to the convention.

Secretary Doak, replying to the many compliments paid to him, said that he had expected to deliver a written address but had decided against it and warned his auditors that his remarks were to be made on the spur of the moment and not to be taken in an official sense.

In the course of his talk, he caused his hearers to applaud when he referred indirectly to the agitation concerning a wet plank in the Republican platform.

"All this fuss is a warning to us not to jump too quickly into reforms from which we may want to back out later," he said. "It is a good thing that the makers of the constitution made it as difficult as they did to amend the constitution."

DIES AT WORK IN STORE.

C. A. Hitchcock, 60 years old, 219 Kensington avenue, La Grange, assistant manager of the rug department of Marshall Field & Co., died yesterday of heart disease on the third floor of the retail store.

TALK A TICKET OF ROOSEVELT AND TRAYLOR

[Copyright: 1932: By the Associated Press.]

Two proposed national tickets emerged yesterday from the gossip about the Democratic presidential race. They were "Roosevelt and Traylor" and "Traylor and Roosevelt."

Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National bank, one of the dark horse candidates for President, was visited during the day by James A. Farley, coördinator of the Roosevelt forces. Mayor Cermak also conferred with Farley. The rumor was thus revived that Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt would welcome the banker on the ticket with him if he wins the presidential nomination.

Meanwhile from the campaign headquarters set up by Traylor's friends came the statement that "Democratic success might well be assured if the party could promise a Traylor-Roosevelt administration." Frank Schofield, secretary of the Traylor club, quoted press dispatches as saying Roosevelt forces were suggesting Traylor for Vice President.

WOMAN FOUND DEAD IN HOTEL.

Mrs. Florence Carr, 30 years old, 4177 Nelson street, was found dead yesterday in a room in the North hotel, 1622 North California avenue, where she registered Sunday. A bottle which had contained sedative tablets lay beside her.

ECONOMY PLANK TO BE DEMANDED OF CONVENTION

Business Group Plans to Make Plea Today.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

An explicit plank in the Republican platform pledging a cut of "$750,000,000 at least" in the federal appropriations for the next fiscal year, which begins July, will be demanded of the resolutions committee of the Republican convention. This demand will be presented today, if permitted, by the National Organization to Reduce Public Expenditures, headed by George W. Rossetter, who is also president of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

This demand expresses the desire of virtually all of the substantial business of the United States; and directly and indirectly, Mr. Rossetter estimated, represents 22 million voters. In this plea are joined the United States Chamber of Commerce, the Federation of American Business, the Sentinels of the Republic, and approximately 700 state and local chambers of commerce, trade associations, and agricultural groups.

Providers of Campaign Funds.

The proponents of reduction are assured of an attentive hearing, because from these organizations, or their members, the Republicans will obtain the great bulk of their campaign contributions, if they get a substantial sum. To date the national Republican organization is reported to have less than $500,000 subscribed, as compared with more than six million spent in the 1928 fight. It is said business is waiting to see what congress will do for business—if anything—before business contributes to the politicians.

It is contended by the Rossetter organization that business cannot be revived and unemployment decreased, if virtually all of the income from industry is paid in taxes. They look upon the new law estimated to add a billion 118 million dollars to the tax load as financially impossible to business in general. They will urge reduction of expenses rather than the levying of new taxes in order to balance the federal budget.

Conceding the necessity for the war expenditures—a billion dollars in 1917, 18 billions in 1918, 25 billions in 1919, and 7 billions in 1920, the Rossetter organization has found no sound reason why the appropriations for this federal fiscal year should be an even 4 billions more than in 1915.

Compare U. S. Expenditures.

The organization has made comparisons of pre-war appropriations with those of recent years as follows:

Pre-war.		Post War.
1912..	$634,549,000	1928..	$4,237,550,000
1913..	617,382,000	1929..	4,515,254,000
1914..	684,757,000	1930..	4,928,822,000
1915..	674,497,000	1931..	4,676,668,000
1916..	678,677,000	1932..	4,674,973,000

Of the 1932 budget, totaling 4 billion 674 millions, the government has spent in the first 11 months—the fiscal year ends on June 30—4 billion 455 million dollars. Its income in that period has been only 1 billion 770 millions. Therefore, the administration has an 11 month deficit of 2 billion 684 million dollars. On top of all that, congress is considering another budget in excess of 4 billions, and has been turning out 4 billion dollar budgets annually since 1920.

In the opinion of the Rossetter organization, the government has almost drained dry all of the sources of substantial income, and the group demands that the Republican convention force congress to cut expenses.

Delegates Favor Slashes.

The rank and file of the delegates sympathize with these contentions. They look upon a cut in government expenditures as a national necessity. If turned loose by the leaders, they would probably demand that congress slash expenses, in so far as a convention can make such a demand. Twenty-seven delegates were interview yesterday and all expressed themselves for reduced expenditures.

CONVENTION NOTES

Bertrand H. Snell, permanent chairman of the Republican convention, went to the Stadium for a voice test on the amplifiers. As he practiced his part, Joseph Scott, who will nominate President Hoover, suggested, "You might whistle it, Bert."

Visitors at the Stadium howled when they were charged 17 cents for cigarets. The concessionaire blandly explained he had passed his own tax. New York visitors added a loud protest over Chicago taxi meters.

Ushers and police had a dress rehearsal. The police went through the motions of pushing back crowds and the ushers groped for the dulcet note of "This way, please."

A photographer searching for John D. Rockefeller Jr. stopped F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, to ask if he knew where Mr. Rockefeller might be. Dr. McBride answered coldly: "We are not expecting Mr. Rockefeller."

Conversation in a Congress hotel elevator:
Delegate—"D, please."
Operator—"B, sir?"
Delegate—"D, for depression."

Permanent Chairman Snell hinted at the tenor of his address to the convention saying, "The Democrats in congress were all right when they were following Republican leadership, but when they began thinking for themselves they soon got at sea."

Police Capt. Francis Matchett gave conventioneers a jolt when he announced that no parades, gatherings, or other demonstrations would be permitted in the convention zone. National committeemen buzzed and reached the captain by phone. They breathed easier when he said the order did not apply to the convention itself.

The national committemen's chair marathon in the lobby of the Congress hotel was called off. During the night all chairs were removed. Those who rose early to get a seat went back to bed or dozed on the love seats in Peacock alley.

Badges and buttons blossomed for the first time yesterday. Secretary George De B. Keim had a badge of gold which put all others to shame for weight and length. There are six bars from which his medal dangles. Buttons with the legend "My Vote Goes Wet," were abundant.

Walter E. Edge, ambassador to France, and Mrs. Edge arrived from Atlantic City and went to the Blackstone. Ambassador Edge chatted during the afternoon with Hanford MacNider of Mason City, Ia., minister to Canada.

The Women's International League for Peace will stage a parade at 11 o'clock this morning from the Buckingham fountain. Miss Jane Addams will be the parade marshal.

Every ticket to the convention is accompanied by a slip of paper giving the words of a patriotic song to the tune of "My Country! Tis of Three." Senator Simeon D. Fess said the reverse of the slip should have carried the words of "The Star Spangled Banner" to jog delegates' memories.

Workmen gave a convention dress of red paint to the Brown Elementary school, which has stood at Washington boulevard and Wood street, near the Stadium, for 75 years.

Double doses of perfume are being given the air circulators in the hotel to offset convention smokes.

ECONOMY MOVES PERIL DEFENSE, BINGHAM SAYS

National defense in the air is being undermined under the guise of economy, Senator Hiram Bingham [Rep., Conn], president of the National Aeronautic association, told members of the Chicago chapter of the association last night at a dinner in the Hotel Sherman. He warned that failure to pass appropriations for next year by congress will seriously handicap the army and navy air forces.

The preparedness of the nation is being placed in jeopardy by senators and congressmen who shrink from cutting national expenditures where it will affect bureaucratic jobholders, but seek to save by reducing funds for the air forces, the army and the navy, he declared. An ardent wet, Senator Bingham said there would be no need for a new tax bill or for chopping of national defense appropriations if the 18th amendment were repealed.

Maj. Lafeton Whitney, president of the chapter, presided.

CAUCUS OUSTS MRS. B. W. MILLER, HOOVER SPONSOR

Mrs. Bina West Miller, nationally known leader among Republican women, who was elected personally by President Hoover to deliver a speech seconding his renomination for the Presidency, was defeated last night for reëlection as national committeewoman from Michigan.

The Michigan delegation, caucusing at the Congress hotel, by a vote of 26 to 15 elected Mrs. Jacob Stekatee of Grand Rapids to succeed Mrs. Miller.

Other officers and committee members elected were James E. Davidson, national committeeman; Gov. Wilbur M. Brucker, delegation chairman; Seth U. Culver, committee on credentials; Clyde M. Ford, committee on rules; former Gov. Fred W. Green, committee on resolutions; Louise Woodhouse, honorary vice president of the convention; Charles B. Warren, committee to notify candidate for president, and Cassius L. Glagow, committee to notify candidate for vice president.

Mrs. Frederick M. Alger, chairman of the Michigan division of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, asked the delegation to take a positive stand for repeal of the 18th amendment, but no vote of the delegation was taken.

JOHN D. JR. LEAVES AFTER "SECRET" CHICAGO VISIT

John D. Rockefeller Jr., who created a sensation recently with the announcement that he had become convinced of the futility and even the ill effects of prohibition, made a secret visit to Chicago yesterday. He arrived in the morning and left a New York Central train at Englewood, presumably to evade publicity. The news of his arrival leaked out, however, and there were rumors that he had come on the eve of the convention to confer with certain Republican leaders on the prohibition issue.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER JR.

These rumors, however, were denied emphatically by an associate of Mr. Rockefeller.

"Here on Personal Business."

"Mr. Rockefeller came here on strictly personal business," declared Attorney Thomas M. DeBevoise, who traveled with him. "There were no political conferences and no meetings with Nicholas Murray Butler or any other leaders in the fight for prohibition reform.

"He had hoped to make this a secret trip in every sense of the word. If he had had anything of public interest to discuss he would have made it known. However, he would not talk in New York and he will not talk in Chicago."

Bars Interviewers on Train.

The attorney's statement was made in the car on which Mr. Rockefeller traveled back to New York. The millionaire had slipped unobserved on to the Lake Shore Limited of the New York Central, which left the La Salle street station at 6:30 p. m.

FORGOTTEN SONG OF LINCOLN'S CAMPAIGN IN 1860 IS REVIVED

A campaign song of 1860, long forgotten, was brought to light yesterday by Mrs. R. J. Dobler, 6935 Stewart avenue. The song, supporting Abraham Lincoln, was called "Ship of State," written by E. W. Locke and published by Tobey & Co., 5 Clark street.

The yellowed single sheet of music was discovered by Mrs. Dobler in the Bible that had belonged to her aunt, the late Mrs. Mary Patton. The five stanzas and five different choruses tell the sad story of the Ship of State, which has come into port with "shattered sails and anchors gone," and proposes Lincoln as the new commander. The first stanza declares:

Hark, hark, a signal gun is heard
Just out beyond the fort.
The good old Ship of State, my boys,
Is coming into port.
With shattered sails and anchors gone
I fear the rogues will strand her
She carries now a sorry crew
And needs a new commander.

[Chorus.]
Our Lincoln is the man [repeat].
With a sturdy mate from the Pine Tree State,
Our Lincoln is the man.

The second stanza tells how the ship put out to sea four years before with her hull strong, and sailed "a proud mistress of the ocean, with Buchanan at the helm." The third describes mutiny with "Buchanan here and Douglas there, belching forth their thunder." And in the last stanza:

We'll give her what repairs she needs,
A thorough overhauling.
Her sordid crew shall be dismissed
To seek some honest calling.
Brave Lincoln soon shall take the helm,
On truth and right relying.
In calm or storm, in peace or war,
He'll keep her colors flying.

ELY DOUBTS THAT ROOSEVELT WILL POLL A MAJORITY

New York, June 13.—[Special.]—If the supporters of Gov. Roosevelt could get the backing of all the men to whom they have made offers they would have no trouble securing the Democratic presidential nomination for their candidate, according to Gov. Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts, who was visiting his friend, Alfred E. Smith, here today.

GOV. JOSEPH B. ELY. [Acme Photo.]

But right there is where the rub comes, in Gov. Ely's opinion. He expressed the belief that Gov. Roosevelt would not attain a majority at any time during the approaching convention.

When asked whether there was anything to the report that he had been offered the nomination for the Vice Presidency in exchange for his support of the Roosevelt candidacy, he replied that even if he had been approached along those lines, it would have been futile, because no one could deliver the Massachusetts delegation. It already has been pledged.

Mr. Ely thinks the New York governor will get not more than twenty delegates from Massachusetts and not more than forty from Pennsylvania.

"It is absolutely essential for the Democratic party nominee to form a contrast in personality with Mr. Hoover," he said. "When you think of the contrast you naturally think of Mr. Smith."

BOY INJURED BY CARTRIDGE.

Valparaiso, Ind., June 13.—[Special.]—Carroll, 5 year old son of Robert Masterson, city mail carrier, may lose his leg as a result of an explosion of a Springfield rifle cartridge in a bonfire here today. The bullet struck the boy in the calf of his leg, inflicting a serious wound.

NOW SCIENCE TELLS WHY BRAN IS SO GOOD FOR HEALTH

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Has "Bulk" and Vitamin B; Also Healthful Iron

By using Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, millions of people have overcome common constipation, and the headaches, loss of appetite and energy that so frequently result.

New laboratory tests show ALL-BRAN supplies two things needed to overcome temporary and recurring constipation: "Bulk" to exercise the intestines. Vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of lettuce. Within the body, it forms a soft mass. Gently it clears the intestines of wastes.

Further experiments prove ALL-BRAN provides twice as much blood-building iron as an equal amount by weight of beef liver.

Eat this delicious cereal and avoid pills and drugs. They cause artificial action, and often lead to harmful habits.

Try two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN daily—sufficient to overcome most types of constipation. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

ALL-BRAN has a delicious, nut-sweet flavor. Enjoy as a cereal with milk or cream, or use in making fluffy bran muffins, breads, omelets, etc. Recipes on the red-and-green package. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

PEGLER SAWS SOME WOOD FOR THE PLATFORM

Offers Mr. Heydler as a Model Carpenter.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

The Republicans at the Congress hotel headquarters are having a bit of a wrestle with themselves trying to draw up a platform for Mr. Hoover, although that should not be hard because Mr. Hoover never has been for nor against anything, and I think they might adopt as a perfect model for their platform one of the annual reports of Mr. John Heydler, the president of the National league.

Mr. Heydler is neither for nor against anything, either, although I do believe he completely lost his head one time, went radical and came out against Dishonesty in a general way, with reservations, of course. But it appeared that there were quite a number of dishonest persons in the country, some of whom were customers of the Great National Game, and of course it would never do for the president of the National league to deliver a deliberate and uncalled-for slap in the face of a group of potential customers.

So it was explained that Mr. Heydler had not really come out against Dishonesty but for Honesty, which was his privilege, as any fair-minded customer must admit.

Any Report Will Do.

It would not make any difference which of Mr. Heydler's annual reports the Republicans should adopt for their model, because they are all alike, and, furthermore, I believe his first one was modeled after a Republican platform, so they would not be treading on new ground. It does seem, though, that the Republicans have lost their perspective and are being naive in their worriment over the platform because, after all, it does not matter what a platform says.

A platform is used only in the campaign and is not binding after the election, so even if Mr. Hoover should promise a saloon on every corner he would not have to put a saloon on every corner. He promised a speakeasy on every corner the last time and there are still a number of empty corners in Chicago. He also promised a chicken in every pot, but when the citizens could not even furnish their own pots that let him out.

It is strange that the Republicans have not thought of the great poison ivy question, an issue which is crying for bold treatment this year. I do not know about the slogan "Poison Ivy Must Go" as a campaign cry for Mr. Hoover. It sounds rather radical and destructive but, as a substitute, the phrase, "Poison ivy causes an itchy sensation, which some of our citizens find not altogether pleasant," would be dignified, thoughtful and sympathetic.

Just a Suggested Plank.

Taking one of Mr. Heydler's annual reports—any one—as a model, the Republican platform could deal with the great poison ivy question in a manner to give no offense to any possible poison ivy lovers and at the same time endear the candidate to those who find the itchy sensation not altogether pleasant, somewhat as follows:

"The Poison Ivy Question: The Republican party has always taken the stand that our native American shrubs, trees, and sprigs and the little wild flowers growing in our woods and tempted hills should be dealt with according to the changing circumstances of the times in a fearless but helpful manner. Numbers of our citizens have seemed to think it might be desirable of the government to take steps to formulate a program looking toward the adoption of a vigorous, constructive national plan to the end that some relief might be contemplated for those who find that poison ivy induces an itchy sensation, not altogether pleasant.

Impartial Inquiry Recommended.

"It is the purpose of the Republican party to institute inquiries by an impartial commission, with authority to subpoena witnesses on both sides of the poison ivy question, to consider ways and means of effecting remedial measures consistent with the great principles of peace, prosperity and patriotism which are the foundation stones of this great republic of ours, but without interfering with the rights of either side.

"This is no time for equivocation—or at any rate, not a very good time for it, the police are said to believe, according to rumors current tonight—and the Republican party will endeavor to procure legislation with this principle in view, not forgetting, however, that each case must be judged on its own particular merits, unless, of course, it should seem advisable in the interests of our citizens to extend consideration of the problem further. On this the Republican party takes its stand."

"Mr. Farley" Is Noted.

I have been seeing Mr. James Farley, the chairman of the New York state Democratic committee and of the New York prize fight commission, moving swiftly through the Republican statesmen in the Congress hotel these last few days and I suspect that he is trying to interest them in a dry plank. Mr. Farley is the manager of Franklin D. Roosevelt, it is true, but he is very generous and kind and I am sure he would be glad to write a dry plank for the Republican promising to spend seven or eight billion dollars a year on the enforcement of the Eighteenth amendment, the money to be raised by a special income tax levy, and extolling Bishop Cannon as the greatest living American.

Following Mr. Heydler's model, which was modeled after the Republican platform, I could write a specimen platform offhand, leading off with a flat statement that honesty, if not the best policy, is regarded by many as an excellent policy, although there are two sides to every question and it is unjust to pass sweeping judgment on a proposition having so many intricate phases.

No. 2 would recommend chewing the food 69 times except in the cases of oatmeal, soup, ice cream, finnan haddie, hamburger, and turkey stuffing, unless the individual finds that a few times more or less are better suited to his, or her, particular requirements.

No. 3. The Republican party holds that so far as experiments have shown a rolling stone is likely to gather no moss, or, at any rate, rather less moss than a stone which is not rolled, although even a nonrolling stone might gather none if it were not in a mossy place.

No. 4. A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush at the present rate of exchange and efforts will be made to maintain this ratio as long as it is consistent with the public interest to do so.

No. 5. It is sometimes darkest before the dawn, but there are some nights in the dark of the moon when it is very dark at 11 o'clock.

But I doubt that the Republicans with Mr. Hoover at the head will need any lessons in restraint from Mr. Heydler. In twelve years Mr. Heydler has not discovered that the National league is using a jackrabbit baseball to produce home runs. Mr. Hoover, however, has not yet discovered that prohibition is an issue.

THERE ARE TWO PRINCIPAL GROUPS OF MERCHANTS IN THIS COUNTRY

The first and larger is the price group. Its appeal is always on price. It tries to buy and sell things cheaper, cheaper, cheaper.

To meet its demands manufacturers are continually lowering standards.

The other is the quality group. Here the effort is to offer the best possible quality at each particular price. To win the business of these merchants, manufacturers must produce better and better quality. The result of such competition is the very best merchandise to be had in each price classification.

Without any "ifs, ands or buts," this Store has always belonged to the quality group.

FARM DEMANDS SPLIT ON ISSUE OF U. S. BOARD

BY PAUL POTTER.

Farm relief issues to be placed before the Republican convention's resolutions committee today were split between two camps of agrarian leadership yesterday as the demand for repeal of the farm marketing act was voiced by one group and a plea for amending it to include some commodity price fixing scheme was being framed by the other.

Minus all the flare of public demonstrations which farmers used in pressing their claims at the Kansas City convention in 1928, three farm groups joined forces to insist upon clipping the stabilization features from the three year old federal marketing act. The American Farm Bureau federation, the National Grange, and the Farmers' union, each favoring a different plan of governmental control of crop surplus, were prepared to go before the platform committee today.

Blow at Farm Board.

They were met last night by a public protest against "an attempt to set up a monopolistic agency at government expense" when Thomas R. Cain, president of the Farmers' National Grain Dealers' association, declared riddance of the farm board to be the "first step to restore normal markets to the farmer and the country."

Cain, speaking before the Grain Analysts' club at the Hamilton club, said that 7 of every 10 farmers in the nation were opposed to the farm board's operations. He charged that this farm relief "has in each and every instance been a complete failure, an expensive experiment to the federal treasury, and a far greater one to the American farmer."

Cain's organization, representing more than 400,000 farmer stockholders in farmers' elevators, was characterized by this "dirt farmer" from Jacksonville, Ill., as the "largest and oldest farmers' coöperative body on record and represents the true voice of agriculture."

Three Plans Favored.

Although the farm bureau-grange-union group, together representing less than a million of more than 6 million farmers in the country, recognizes the failure of the government's attempt to stabilize farm prices, they are making an effort to salvage the farm board by an amendment to the marketing act. Each organization sponsors a different scheme, but they agreed yesteday to ask for a convention plank on agriculture which would leave the selection of the crop control principle to the farm board.

The Farm Bureau federation insists upon an equalization fee being charged against each farmer to cover losses by dumping surpluses on world markets. The grange and union each sponsor an export debenture plan to attempt to make the farm tariffs effective, or a crop allotment plan which would call for the government to assign amounts of crops each farmer might produce.

All three plans were declared "uneconomic and unsound" in an address last night by B. W. Snow, vice president of the Federation of American Business. Snow declared that all three plans involved huge government expenditures. He warned that "false prophets may drive farmers still further down the road to ruin," in referring to the efforts farm groups were making to have them adopted in party platforms.

PEACE PARADE OF WOMEN TO BE HELD TODAY

Automobiles bringing women peace proponents from all over the country will converge this morning at Buckingham fountain in Grant park for the peace parade to be led by Miss Jane Addams of Hull house. The parade will proceed to the Republican national convention in the Stadium at 11 o'clock. The demonstration has been arranged by delegations from various organizations promoting world peace, and aims at a plank in the Republican platform embodying that sentiment.

Miss Addams, as president of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, will ride in the vanguard of the procession in the big white sedan of City Greeter George Gaw. Miss Jeanette Rankin, former congresswoman from Montana, is a leader in the demonstration.

From Indiana fifty cars will arrive to join the parade, it was announced yesterday. One at least is expected from every other state in the union outside of Illinois. The Chicagoland representation, it is expected, will far surpass all other groups in size although estimates were difficult yesterday.

He seized a revolver and captured Holston as the Negro backed out of the office, where he had terrorized four employés and 15 customers. Holston confessed 20 other store robberies to police.

FRANCE IS ONLY CANDIDATE AT BATTLE SCENE

Reiterates Demand for Quick Repeal.

As convention morning dawns, former United States Senator Joseph I. France of Maryland remained the only candidate for the presidential nomination present at the scene of the so-called battle. Seldom has it occurred that only one aspiraent for the high office had headquarters on the grounds.

And Mr. France's last utterance before the first fall of the gavel was just as wet as ever. He issued a statement again demanding the repeal of all national dry laws and a return to the legal situation of pre-war days.

Repeal Tide Sweeps Country.

"The rising tide for repeal," read the statement, "is sweeping the convention and the country. It is irresistible. Resubmission will satisfy nobody.

"All true believers must now recognize that President Hoover's misnomered 'noble experiment' is an utter failure. Moral, legal, and economic considerations demonstrate the urgent necessity of its earliest possible cessation.

"I advocate not only the adoption of an outright repeal plank by this convention and repeal of the eighteenth amendment, but also the earliest possible repeal of the Volstead act with no other congressional legislation substituted in place thereof except a provision for taxation of the sale of beer and wines to provide $500,000,000 or more public revenue.

Would End Dry Régime.

"Such action would leave the eighteenth amendment a dead letter, inoperative because infringements of the same, while illegal under the constitution, would not be criminal and could not be penalized.

"At the next national election following repeal of the Volstead act, a questionnaire should be submitted to the people direct in every congressional district—not to legislatures or conventions—to let the voters themselves state whether they desire the retention of the eighteenth amendment or its repeal. By this plan only can a mandate from the people be ascertained.

"In states which vote for repeal, legislatures would feel in honor bound to carry out the expressed wishes of their people. In states that vote dry, they would be impelled to provide means for regulation or local prohibition of the liquor traffic by the states in accordance with the wishes of their own people."

Would Bind Delegates.

A rule to obligate delegates in future Republican conventions to vote for the presidential candidate receiving the highest vote in their state preferential primaries was outlined today at the France headquarters.

France entered a number of primaries in which President Hoover did not run, and claims that 231 delegates are morally bound to vote for him.

He said today that he had heard "rumors" that the Hoover administration was claiming the delegates from the same states and that he denied the right of those delegates to vote for anybody but himself.

BODY TAKEN FROM LAKE.

The body of Fred J. Anderson, 55 years old, 7027 Cornell avenue, was recovered yesterday from the lake off 59th street. Police said that Anderson, who had been missing since June 10, was despondent over unemployment.

British Birth Rate Falls to a New Low Record

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, June 13.—Great Britain's birth rate set a new low record during the first quarter of this year. There were 153,512 births, 7,451 less than in the first quarter of 1931. The rate is the lowest recorded for any first quarter since the establishment of civil registration of births.

Excess Weight Drove Her From The Movies!

But the famous Hellmann Slenderizing Plan restored her youthful figure and started her anew to screen success

"WHEN I last weighed myself at the studio the scale showed 121 pounds. I have never felt or looked better in my life. And yet only three years ago I was forced to renounce my movie career because of excess weight. Over-indulgence had ruined my figure . . . and with it, my chances for spectacular success on the screen.

"I was not really discouraged at first. A few reducing baths, I thought, would restore my figure to its former slenderness. But reducing baths and starvation diets had no real effect.

"Then one lucky day a friend suggested that I try the Hellmann Slenderizing Plan. And rather skeptically I consented.

"For six weeks I followed this plan. I substituted two salads daily covered with Hellmann's Mayonnaise for rich cream soups and too many fattening foods.

"And the result was extraordinary. In 6 weeks I lost 17 pounds! My figure regained its former slenderness. And I felt like a new person . . . with renewed hope and health."

* * *

Why don't you adopt the Hellmann Slenderizing Plan? Two salads daily topped with Hellmann's Mayonnaise. In 60 days you will be amazed at the way the pounds will surely and safely drop away!

Always insist on Hellmann's Mayonnaise. It contains fresh eggs, special salad oils, vinegar, rare spices. Then double-whipped for extra creaminess. Start this slenderizing plan today!

Why should smokers accept this old-fashioned notion of the cigarette trade?

BY this time you must be pretty well convinced of the fact that other cigarettes do not like to talk about inhaling.

And yet—this subject—so "untouchable" in cigarette advertising—is very close to your welfare! For you do inhale—we all do—knowingly or unknowingly, every smoker breathes in some part of the smoke he or she draws out of a cigarette.

"Let sleeping dogs lie" may be the cigarette trade's answer to us! But what's their answer to you? Do you inhale? Lucky Strike does not avoid this vital question. It meets the issue fairly and squarely—because certain impurities concealed in even the finest, mildest tobacco leaves are removed by Lucky Strike's famous purifying process. Luckies created that process. Only Luckies have it!

GASTON B. MEANS FOUND GUILTY OF McLEAN SWINDLE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 13.—[Special.]—Gaston B. Means, central figure in a score of national sensations during the last two decades, lost another bout with the law today when a federal jury found the former department of justice agent guilty of stealing $104,000 entrusted to him by Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean for the purpose of ransoming the Lindbergh baby.

GASTON B. MEANS. [Acme Photo.]

The jury, consisting of eleven men and one woman, found Means guilty of larceny on two counts, one for the $100,000 ransom money which the "supersleuth" obtained from Mrs. McLean, estranged wife of Edward B. McLean, publisher, and a second for $4,000 expense money. He was acquitted on two embezzlement charges.

Liable for 20 Years.

The convictions made him liable to a maximum sentence of twenty years in the federal penitentiary and a $2,000 fine. If he loses his appeal for a new trial, it will mean his second trip to the penitentiary.

On the assumption that Means still has the $100,000 turned over to him by the Washington society woman, he will still have something like $5,000 for each year spent in jail if he gets the maximum. On the basis of a two year sentence, which is considered the minimum punishment which might be meted out, his sojourn in jail would net him $50,000 a year.

It took the jury only one hour and 55 minutes to reach its verdict after District Attorney Rover had closed his appeal for a conviction with the declaration that Means "was a man who preyed on mother love, a man without a heart."

Large of stature, his broad, florid face beaming a cheerful smile, Means stood up to hear the sentence which he thought would clear him. His face turned suddenly grim as the foreman of the jury answered: "Guilty," on the count of larceny.

By the time the foreman had answered guilty for the second count of larceny, Means was his usual affable self again. As the jury foreman concluded with a "not guilty" to the charge of embezzlement, the former government sleuth slumped nonchalantly back into his chair and began slowly munching a cough drop.

Less than fifteen minutes after the verdict, Means was en route to the district jail. A plea for freedom of the prisoner on bail was denied by Justice Proctor. Means left without making a statement. Morris Wampler, defense attorney, denounced the verdict as outrageous.

On the afternoon of May 4 Washington learned that Mrs. McLean had sworn out a warrant for Means, charging him with the theft of $100,000, which she had given him to use in ransoming the infant son of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. Within the next few hours department of justice agents unfolded a series of fantastic negotiations and stage play.

Paid to Get Lindbergh Baby.

When the final odds and ends of the case had finally been pieced together and presented to a jury, it was found that Mrs. McLean, mother of three living children and one dead boy, had given the former Harding detective the $100,000 on his assurance he would recover the Lindbergh child to his parents. Means had negotiated in "code," collected the money in bills from Mrs. McLean, led her on a wild goose chase to El Paso, Tex., promised to free the boy in Chicago and a number of other points and then bluntly refused to refund the money when Mrs. McLean's patience became exhausted.

Means had been engaged by Mrs. McLean, despite the former's unsavory record which had found him charged with murder, forgery, and many other crimes on the calendar, because her association with him during the Harding administration had convinced her he was an outstanding detective.

ASKS DIVORCE

ADA MAY.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 13.—[Special.]—A suit for divorce has been filed in Common Pleas court here in behalf of Ada May, dancer and comedienne, who was married secretly in 1924 to Col. Wilson Potter of Chestnut Hill, war veteran and big game hunter. The grounds were not disclosed.

Ada May, who was Miss Ada May Weeks before her marriage, is Col. Potter's second wife, his first, the former Miss Charlotte J. Rust, having divorced him in 1920. Ada May started her career at the age of 14 as a solo dancer in a Ziegfeld show.

Woman Pleads Guilty to $25,000 Embezzlement

Dorothy Dunbar, alias Mrs. Jack Thompson, 47 years old, 3041 Logan boulevard, pleaded guilty yesterday before Judge James J. Kelly to the embezzlement of $25,000 from the Hartford Indemnity and Casualty company, 175 West Jackson boulevard. Her plea for probation was continued until June 24. Mrs. Thompson worked as cashier and bookkeeper for the company for six years. The shortage was discovered when she took a vacation in the fall of 1931. She told Judge Kelly that she had used the money in "reckless living" and had turned over all her possessions to the company as part restitution.

DEMANDS QUIZ OF POLICE BLUNDERS IN LINDY SEARCH

Senator Voices Criticism; Hunt at Dead End.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 13.—[Special.]—Police action in the Lindbergh kidnaping case was attacked from official sources today and a move was made toward an investigation of the entire proceedings.

Attacking the administration of Gov. Moore as being responsible for the tactics followed by the state troopers. Mr. Richards said: "The Lindbergh case has been slaughtered to make a Democratic political holiday."

Lists Five "Major Blunders."

The following five "major blunders" were listed by the senator:

"The events which led up to the suicide last Friday of Violet Sharpe, maid in the Englewood, N. J., home of Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, grandmother of the slain Lindbergh baby, and the subsequent seizure of Ernest Brinkert, a Westchester county garage man, Miss Sharpe and Brinkert later having been virtually elliminated from all suspicion.

"The futile payment of $50,000 ransom through Dr. John F. [Jafsie] Condon after a series of weird negotiations.

"John H. Curtis' hoax of Col. Lindbergh and the police.

"The failure of the police to find the baby's body five miles from the Lindbergh estate at Hopewell, N. J."

"Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the state police," said the senator, "appears more or less to be the goat." Mr. Richards, however, also assailed the lead taken by Inspector Harry Walsh of the Jersey City police in connection with the questioning of Miss Sharpe and Brinkert.

Governor Defends Police.

In the face of criticism Gov. A. Harry Moore of New Jersey came to the defense of his state police.

"I have talked with Col. Schwarzkopf and am satisfied that the police have done nothing anywhere near approaching the third degree," was Gov. Moore's comment on the widely expressed theory that the Morrow maid took her life rather than face resumption of interrogation.

"I believe them in no way deserving of censure. I stand squarely behind Col. Schwarzkopf in his efforts."

By orders from the Sharpe family in England arrangements have been made to bury Miss Sharpe in this country. The date and place of the funeral has not been announced.

Mrs. Morrow has made no direct statement in the case. Friends tonight said Mrs. Morrow still believes Miss Sharpe was guiltless, but does not hold the police responsible for the girl's death. Mrs. Morrow will sail tonight for Europe with her daughter, Miss Constance Morrow, and her son, Dwight Morrow Jr.

Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh, it is understood, may remain at Englewood for a time and then leave for part of the summer, probably to stay at the Morrow estate in Maine. Mrs. Lindbergh is reported to have given herself over to music study in an attempt to subordinate the memory of the kidnaping.

Bring Up Case in Parliament.

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, June 13.—[Special.]—The Lindbergh case will have its first repercussion in parliament Wednesday, when a member of the house of commons will ask the foreign office if the government had its attention called to the suicide of Violet Sharpe, a British subject, in New Jersey, and if it would make representations to the Washington government suggesting an inquiry as to what responsibility the police had for the girl's death.

Meantime, there is indignant criticism of the matter in a portion of the British press.

PICK DELEGATES IN WILMETTE'S NEW VOTE PLAN

Jesse Edward Worthen, president of the Wilmette chamber of commerce, and Ralph H. Rice, an electrical engineer, were the first two delegates selected last night in starting Wilmette's new system of choosing candidates for public office.

These two, chosen at a meeting of citizens in the village hall, will in turn name two others, and then retire. The two named by Worthen and Rice will choose a third, and the three will name two representatives from each of the sixteen civic organizations backing the new plan.

This caucus will select four delegates from each of the twelve voting precincts of the suburb, who will finally name the candidates for every elective public office, except the school board members, and these choices are expected to be unopposed.

DELEGATES SEE A PREVIEW OF 1933 WORLD FAIR

A preview of the 1933 Century of Progress in Chicago was given to Republican delegates, alternates and officers of the national convention last night at the exposition grounds. A crowd of 5,000 persons witnessed the program, which ended with a display of fireworks.

The entertainment took place in the court of the huge Hall of Science. The modernistic rainbow lighting system on the walls and campanile of this structure were turned on for the first time. Red, green, blue and yellow lights flooded the façade of the building.

After racing events and life saving exhibitions, a fleet of 80 steam and sailing yachts paraded down the lagoon between the mainland, on which the Hall of Science stands, and Northerly island, where the electrical group is nearing completion. Then came a concert by the Mundy choristers, jubilee singers. After darkness settled an army plane soared overhead and laid down a smoke screen, which was illuminated red and green by searchlights on the island.

WOMAN ROBBED IN HOME.

A bandit about five feet two inches tall yesterday robbed Mrs. Myrtle Beaborn, 45 years old, 3828 Pine Grove avenue, of $35. He gained admission to the apartment on the pretense that he wanted to rent a room.

FINISH PLANS TO ENTERTAIN G. O. P. VISITORS

The committee on the entertainment of delegates and visitors to the Republican and Democratic national conventions met with its chairman, Edward J. Kelly, yesterday afternoon at the city hall for a report on final plans. The headquarters of the committee will be at the Chicago Athletic association.

Clayton F. Smith and James J. Callahan announced that the White Sox and Cubs officials will provide free seats at the ball parks for all delegates carrying courtesy cards, with the exception of Saturdays and Sundays. The cards also will be honored at the race tracks.

"A Day at the Polls," a play written by County Judge Jarecki, will be given at the Apollo theater tomorrow night for the amusement of Republican convention visitors.

Parks in the city will furnish every accommodation to the guests, including free automobile and guide service, George W. Dixon reported. Thomas J. Bowler announced that arrangements are being made with steamship lines to provide free lake cruises for the delegates.

ALDERMEN RIP INTO GARNER'S PORK BARREL ACT

Unanimous Vote Assails Federal Waste.

"By a unanimous vote the city council yesterday denounced the Garner "pork barrel" postoffice bill as unjustifiable and wasteful and called upon the senate to defeat it. Copies of the council resolution, introduced by Ald. B. A. Cronson [4th], will be transmitted by City Clerk Brady to Senators Lewis and Glenn of Illinois, with the request that they communicate the protest of America's second largest city to their fellow members of the senate when the Garner bill comes before that body. It has already been passed by the house.

ALD. CRONSON.

Economy Is Vital Need.

"Drastic economies in the operation of local governments are necessary to relieve the intolerable burden upon taxpayers and rescue the nation from general bankruptcy," says the Cronson resolution.

"The Garner bill, providing for the expenditure of $1,170,000,000 for nearly 5,000 postoffice buildings throughout the country, is a proposal for enormous expenditures on unnecessary and unproductive public buildings.

"The interest and upkeep of 2,300 of these postoffices, to cost 150 millions, would be 14 millions annually, in contrast to the upkeep of only 3 millions on the buildings they would replace.

"The bill contemplates placing $70,000 buildings in towns of 1,000 population, many of which towns voluntarily and patriotically have rejected these unneeded federal expenditures.

No Immediate Relief.

"It would be some time before plans could be drawn and contracts let on these buildings, and even if such construction were initiated the relief of unemployment would be insignificant.

"The city council urges the senate to defeat the Garner postoffice bill in the interest of the American taxpayers, as providing for unjustifiable and wasteful expenditures of public money."

"We're passing a reduced budget here today to cut taxes locally, so it is appropriate to ask congress not to add any additional burden on Chicago payers of federal taxes," commented Ald. Cronson.

"In our Chicago budget we have trimmed even the most essential services to the bone, in order to save the taxpayers every possible dollar. What will it avail us to do this if congress passes this outrageous pork barrel measure and takes from Chicago citizens the money we have saved them in local taxes, in the form of increased income and other federal levies?"

SOLDIER HELD ON ROBBERY CHARGE.

Morris Estes, 21 years old, a soldier on leave from Selfridge field, Mich., and Harold Keith, 26 years old, a cab driver, were held to the grand jury yesterday in bond of $10,000 each by Judge Allegretti on a charge of attempting to rob a Thompson restaurant at 111 East Chicago avenue.

ALDERMEN FIGHT ANY MOVE TO SELL CITY WATER SYSTEM

A resolution designed to stop any negotiations for the sale of Chicago's self-supporting water system, which delivers water to citizens at a rate lower than that charged in any other large city in the country, was introduced in the city council yesterday by Ald. Wiley W. Mills [37th], O. E. Northrup [19th] and David L. Sutton [3th].

"We have been startled by press reports," said the resolution, "that the mayor is giving serious consideration to the possible sale of Chicago's magnificent water works system to private investors from New York.

"If this great property and fine service should pass into the control of a private corporation it would at once come under the control of the Illinois commerce commission, to be speedily followed by universal metering, inflated capitalization, deteriorated service and increased rates.

"We call upon the mayor to cease negotiations for the sale and we call upon the public to protest against all such negotiations."

The resolution was referred to the finance committee.

The council approved Mayor Cermak's reappointments of Bernard Majewski to the library board and Dr. Allen J. Hruby to the board of the municipal tuberculosis sanitarium.

COUNTY PAYS EMPLOYES FOR HALF OF MARCH

County employés yesterday received their overdue salaries for the first half of March. The pay roll totaled $375,000 and an additional $100,000 was mailed out to mothers on the county pension roll and to jurors who served during April. The money was advanced by County Treasurer McDonough in anticipation of fee earnings in county offices.

COUNCIL ADOPTS BUDGET; IS 23% UNDER LAST YEAR

$126,800,000 to Be Spent from City Funds.

After a twelve hour session yesterday the city council, by a vote of 41 to 2, approved an annual appropriation bill calling for expenditures this year of $126,800,000 from the city's corporate, water, bond, vehicle tax, and miscellaneous funds. Ald. Wiley W. Mills [37th] and William H. Feigenbutz [45th] cast the only dissenting votes.

The total amount set up in the bill is 23 per cent less than the 167 million dollars appropriated for 1931. Appropriations from the corporate fund, which alone of city funds has any great effect on tax bills total $50,200,000, which is a 20 per cent reduction below those for last year.

Praise from Mayor Cermak.

This reduction brought the following comment from Mayor Cermak:

"I think that the passage of this budget will convince the bankers that city officials intend to restrict expenditures to estimated revenues and the budget will have the tendency to restore Chicago's credit.

"If conditions improve and property owners are able to pay their taxes Chicago will be restored to a sound financial standing far ahead of other cities due to our prompt action in cutting expenditures to meet decreasing revenues. If the city's action is followed by the other local taxing bodies taxes for 1932 will be reduced at least 20 per cent and perhaps as much as 35 per cent. The public should demand the resignation of the school trustees if they do not follow suit."

The corporate fund budget for this year differs chiefly from those of previous years in that it reduces the salaries of city employés by 78 days' pay, and the salaries of the judges and employés of the Municipal court, who have fought against a reduction, by 43 days' pay. The only recourse of the court to obtain a larger appropriation is to mandamus the council.

Other changes include the establishment of a central purchasing office in the department of public works, and the creation in the police department of eight supervising captains, or police inspectors, as a major move in the reorganization of that department.

Two Positions Eliminated.

The twelve hour session, broken by only two intermissions, was devoted to a review of the items in the budgets submitted on June 3 by the finance committee and the consideration of several hundred amendments which the committee approved last Friday at the request of Mayor Cermak. Two major positions eliminated were those of George Feser, chief clerk in the city collector's office, and Robert Knight, deputy building commissioner.

Over the protests of club women the board of moving picture censors was reduced from eight members to four. Those eliminated, if civil service ratings are followed, are Effie D. Sigler, who was in charge; Cora C. Doolittle, Mrs. Frances Jaames, and Sara Riley.

JURY SELECTED TO TRY LIGHTING FRAUD CHARGES

A jury was completed yesterday in the criminal court of Judge John Prystalski to try Harry A. Johnson, president of the Electrical Contracting company, 844 Rush street, and four suspended city employés on charges of conspiracy to defraud the city of $300,000 in street lighting contracts.

The former employés of the city department of gas and electricity on trial are John Muerling, engineer; Eugene A. Quinn, inspector; Frank Wirgoske, stockkeeper, and Joseph Duffy, a department custodian. The state charges that specifications were ignored in carrying out the street lighting contracts. Opening statements will be made today.

Grand Jury Indicts 7 as Beverly Bank Robbers

Seven young men, ranging in age from 19 to 23 years old, were charged with the $16,127 robbery on May 31 of the Beverly State Savings bank, 103d and Loomis streets, in true bills voted yesterday by the grand jury. They are Sam Clementi, Wilford Corriveau, Pasquale Zeffiri, and Tony Fornato, who have confessed, and Tony Lococo, Paul Leonardi, and Tony Dirigolamo.

AKRON, BACK IN EAST, IS MOORED IN 30 MINUTES

Parris Island, S. C., June 13.—(AP)—Completing its trans-continental flight from Sunnyvale, Cal., without mishap, the navy's giant dirigible Akron arrived here late today and tied up at the marine station mooring mast for the night.

A light rain was falling when the big silver hulled craft sailed over the marine barracks at 6:15 p. m., eastern standard time.

It circled the station with two of its eight motors running, and drifted slowly toward the mooring mast. Within 30 minutes the queen of the air was safely moored.

Lieutenant Commander Charles H. Rosendahl, in charge of the Akron, and the crew spent the night aboard the dirigible. Brig. Gen. Harry Lee, commanding officer of the marine barracks, who conferred with Rosendahl, said the Akron commander did not plan to leave Parris Island for Lakehurst until 7:30 p. m. tomorrow.

He would not leave then, Lee said, unless the weather were favorable. The heavy downpour of rain continued tonight, although there was little wind.

Refueling began soon after the mooring was completed. A supply of 4,000 gallons of gasoline was available, but it was not expected all this would be taken aboard.

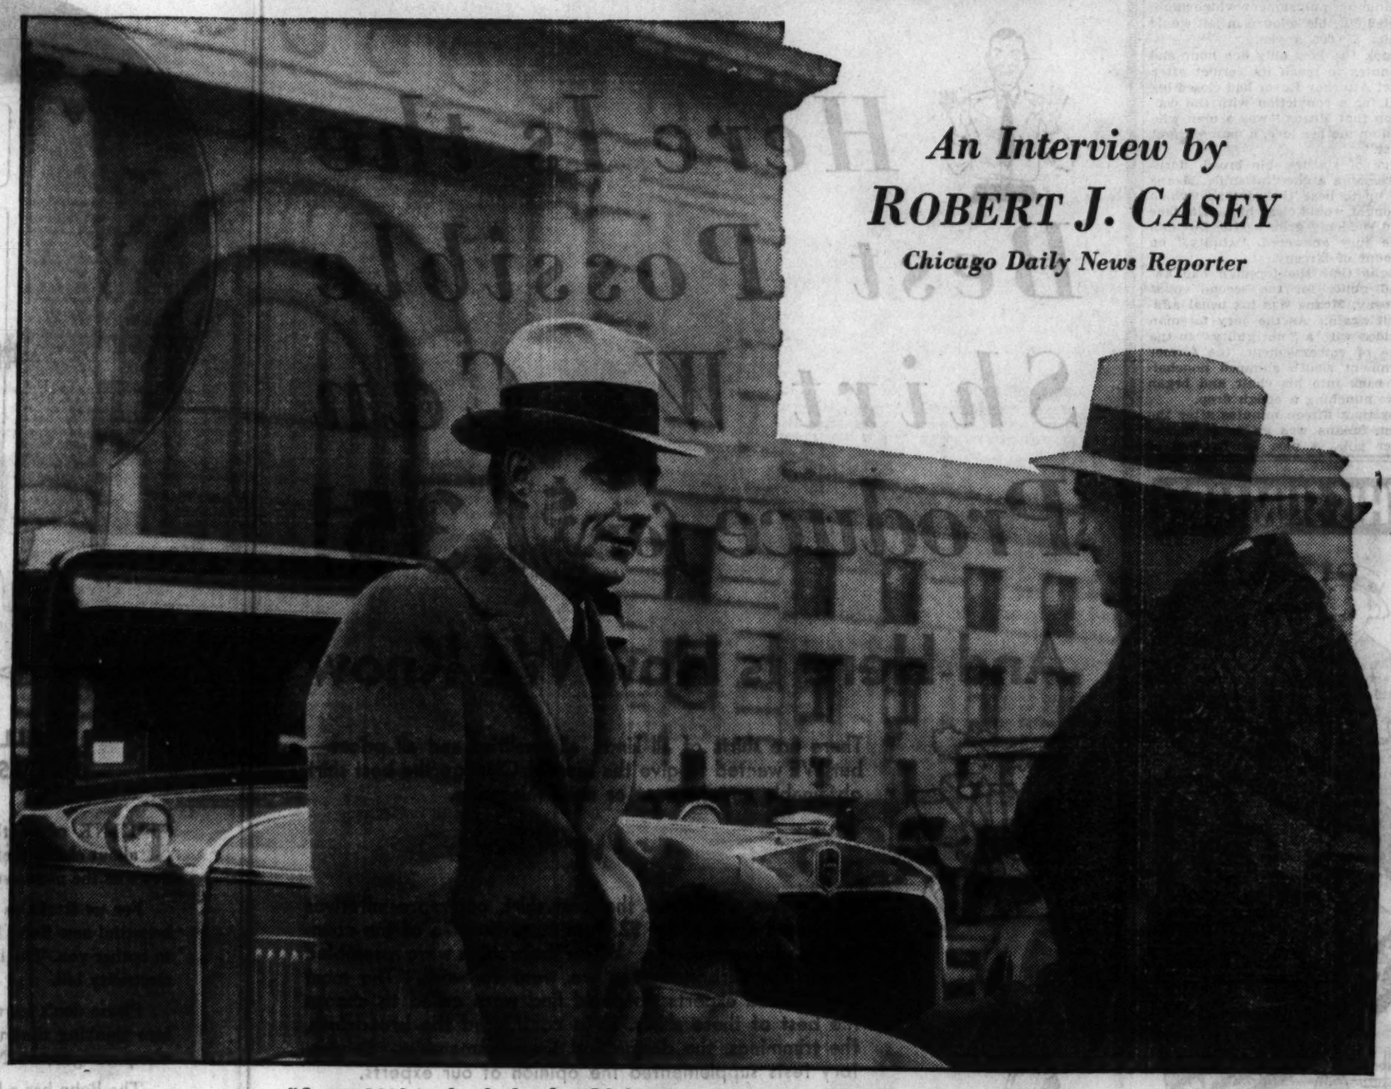
"I DROVE SMACK INTO A BLIZZARD"

An Interview by ROBERT J. CASEY
Chicago Daily News Reporter



"It was 119° in the shade when I left Salina, Kansas, last summer. One week later my Nash was on top of Pike's Peak in a raging blizzard," E. J. Corcoran, master mechanic of Kansas City, tells R. J. Casey, famous Chicago News reporter. Read the story of his trip.

THERE was snow in the air and ice on the pavement and the long hill up from the Missouri bottoms seemed almost perpendicular as E. J. Corcoran, master mechanic for the Kansas City Light and Power Company, turned the nose of his 1929 Nash up the grade without bothering to change gears.

"They'll tell you that engine power comes out of the fuel," he said as the car began to accelerate. "But I'm telling you that nobody is going to take this hill on high without proper lubrication. Listen to the engine. It sounds just as it did the day it came off the showroom floor. And that's Iso-Vis oil."

He passed two other cars without effort and swung onto the level at the summit.

"Do you find the oil equally efficient summer and winter?" the reporter asked.

He nodded his head. "Weather doesn't seem to make any difference," he said. "I drove to Colorado last summer. It was 119° in the shade when I went through Salina. The average temperature for the whole trip was never below 102 and a week after leaving Kansas City I was on top of Pike's Peak in a blizzard. There never was a time on all that trip when you couldn't have put your hand on the radiator."

"How about carbon, and crankcase dilution and the other lubrication troubles?"

"If there's any carbon I don't know anything about it. I've never had to do anything with the engine. I have the oil changed regularly and it comes out as full bodied as it was when it was put in.

"Listen . . . you don't have oil trouble if you use the right oil. I drive about a thousand miles a month. I've got 38,500 miles on this car right now and you couldn't ask any better performance. There's no limit to the life of an American car if you give it half a chance."

Mr. Corcoran's 38,500 trouble-free miles prove again what Iso-Vis has demonstrated in laboratory tests and in A. A. A. tests on the Indianapolis Speedway—Positive Lubrication Protection. Iso-Vis (a Standard Oil product) will not thin out from dilution. See the Ball and Bottle Test at Standard Oil service stations and dealers.

HOUSE YIELDS TO BONUS ARMY; WILL ACT TODAY

Approval of Patman Bill Is Believed Certain.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 13.—[Special.]—The house of representatives capitulated today to the bonus army's demand for immediate payment of the two billion 400 million dollar bonus. By a vote of 226 to 175 it quickly frustrated the plan of the ways and means committee to keep all bonus legislation off the floor this session.

WRIGHT PATMAN. [Acme photo.]

Immediately thereafter, by a vote of 225 to 169, it adopted a rule giving the Patman bill right of way tomorrow, with debate limited to four hours equally divided between the pros and cons. Party lines dissolved in the face of the bonus army's threats to remember in the November elections those who failed to vote for legislation which would start the printing presses to work making inflation money to pay the bonus. On the vote to discharge the committee, 69 Republicans joined 169 Democrats and the house's one Farmer-Labor member, to roll up a surplus of 51 votes. Forty-two Democrats and 133 Republicans defied the entrenched veterans.

Late Vote Is Expected.

House leaders regard adoption of the Patman bill a certainty. The vote should come late in the day unless a filibuster of amendments forces the decision over until Wednesday. The house, however, will take up no other legislation under the privileged rule until the bonus vote is taken.

Defeat of the bill in the senate appeared probable. From fifty to sixty-five senators are counted as determined to vote against it. If the unexpected happens, however, the White House will veto the legislation, with the clear probability that neither the house nor the senate will override it.

The galleries were filled with veterans from the bonus encampment over on the Anacostia flats. Several thousand more were unable to gain admittance and waited on the Capitol plaza for news from the battle front within. Warnings by the bonus army leaders, however, had their effect. Not a handclap or cheer marked the brief debate or the announcement of victory.

Vote of Illinois Men.

The lineup of the Illinois delegation in the house vote today on the petition to bring the bonus bill out of committee follows:

FOR THE BONUS.

AGAINST.

Rainey, Democrat; Morton D. Hull, Britten, Chindblom, Allen, Chiperfield, Hall, Holaday, Republicans.

Absent: De Priest, Reid, Johnson, William E. Hull, Republicans.

Proposes Face Value Pay.

The Patman bill proposes that the government pay the adjusted service certificates at their face value, despite the fact that they are not due until 1945 and the added fact that a large proportion of the face value represents interest that will accrue on the actual bonus in the intervening 14 years.

To raise the necessary two billion 400 million dollars for this purpose, the Patman bill provides for the printing of treasury notes to that amount. In a gesture at protecting the value of the dollar, the treasury is ordered to issue United States bonds bearing 3½ per cent interest.

Debate Is Spirited.

Debate on the adoption of the discharge petition was brief but spirited.

"I am here wearing my shirt of fire," declared Representative E. E. Cox [Dem., Ga.], "determined to fight to the last to stem this raid on the treasury. Are there no men here who are willing to risk their political lives for the sake of their country?"

Anxious glances were cast at the grim looking veterans in the galleries when Representative Robert G. Simmons [Rep., Neb.] shouted: "This congress is not going to be coerced by this group of veterans or any other group in this country."

A sympathetic, if not favorable, senate sentiment was shown today by a vote of 63 to 9 in favor of taking up a resolution by Senator Smith W. Brookhart [radical Rep., Ia.] to reorganize the senate pensions committee into a "committee on veterans' affairs," to which all veterans' legislation should be sent.

Senator Brookhart and others favorable to the veterans charged that veterans' bills had had scant consideration in the finance committee, to which most of them are now sent. The resolution was looked on as a move to smooth the way for the bonus bill if it reaches the senate.

Debate on the resolution, with the final issue in doubt, was halted when the hour came to take up the farm relief bill.

RAIN THINS RANKS OF BONUS ARMY IN WASHINGTON

Washington, D. C., June 13.—[Special.]—Washington is praying for more rain. After one day's downpour 1,000 of its bonus army veterans pulled stakes and departed for home. A little more rain, said Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, chief of police, and the exodus will be complete.

In a new effort to clear the city of veterans, Glassford today again notified the veterans of the bonus expeditionary force that the police are no longer able to provide food and shelter. It was reported in one newspaper that the police chief had urged the army band to go to the Anacostia camp and play "Home, Sweet Home."

Glassford had been criticized because of his efforts in behalf of the bonus marchers. During the last ten days he had devoted more time to the comfort of the veterans than to any other endeavor. The result was the veterans were so well satisfied with conditions that they broadcast the news to other veterans and the result has been a big increase in numbers.

DEMAND HOOVER TELL HOW TO GET NEW ECONOMIES

Robinson Wants Specific Recommendation.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 13.—[Special.]—A resolution demanding a bill of particulars was the Democratic retort which Senator Joe T. Robinson [Ark.], senate minority leader, today flung back in answer to the President's notification of last Saturday that congress must save or find in revenues an additional 150 to 200 million dollars.

And backing up the resolution went a three-ply oratorical attack by Senators Robinson, Pat Harrison [Miss.], and James F. Byrnes [S. C.]. Senator David A. Reed [Rep., Pa.] opposed Senator Robinson's request that the resolution be immediately considered.

Senator Robinson's demand was for the President to confer with his department and commission and bureau chiefs and then "submit to congress for its consideration specific suggestions covering each item that the President recommends as a suitable way and place to accomplish the proposed reduction of 200 million dollars in the appropriations for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1932."

Stirred by Reed's Defense.

Senator Reed objected. Because the news of the President's demand on congress had come, not from Mr. Hoover himself, but from members of congress whom the President had called into the Saturday night conference, the Pennsylvania senator ducked behind the argument that "no such announcement had been made."

The opposition was all that was necessary to touch Senator Robinson off. He recounted Secretary of the Treasury Mills' approval of the senate's budget balancing plans and then his last minute revision of estimates, which forced the senate to levy 235 millions in new taxes and to work for 350 millions instead of 231 millions in economies.

He told how the senate had considered an economy bill expected to save 238 millions, only to have the President use his influence to bring about the adoption of the enforced furlough plan for federal employes in place of the senate economy committee's 10 per cent pay cut plan, with a consequent loss of 40 millions in savings.

Resents Added Demands.

"Now, while the bill is pending in conference," he shouted, "the announcement is made that 150 millions or 200 millions—the mere difference of 50 millions evidently being so insignificant that it is not important to state which—is required to do what the senate thought it was doing under the advice of the treasury department when it passed the revenue bill."

Though ready, he said, to take "his share of the blame" for the passage of the furlough plan, Senator Reed reminded Robinson that the latter had voted to eliminate proposed cuts in veterans' benefits, which lopped 48 millions from the economy bill.

He had done so, said Senator Robinson, only when he had seen administration senators and members of the economy committee throw their own bill overboard and knock out 40 millions by agreeing to the furlough plan.

Cites Cabinet Opposition.

He had been criticized, he said, for supporting the President and "here I have to fight and argue to find out the facts." He wanted to get the cabinet on record. The President blamed congress, he said, while "almost every chief of department, every cabinet officer, not only has exerted all the powerful influence he possessed, but has prompted message after message sent to members of the senate from citizens living in remote parts of this country with a view to overwhelming them with pressure and preventing the economies which the President is urging."

The appropriations committee reported out the navy department supply bill. As reported, it carries $318,213,461, a cut of $8,134,998 below the bill as passed by the house, a cut of $40,043,662 below last year's appropriations, and of $23,458,989 below the budget estimates.

BONUS MARCHERS INVADE HOTEL; WIN HEARING

A miniature bonus army of about 200 men marched upon Republican convention headquarters in the Congress hotel late last night and, after being shunted from one office to another, won the assurance that their plea, "Adjust the bonus now," would be presented to the platform committee tonight.

The ex-service men marched from Carmen's hall on Ashland boulevard and entered the crowded lobby of the hotel en masse, orderly but determined to make known their cause.

Trooping up the narrow stairway to the headquarters on the mezzanine floor, the marchers first entered the office of James Francis Burke, general counsel for the Republican national committee. Frankly surprised and a little at a loss as to what to do with the visitors, Mr. Burke directed them down the corridor to the office of George B. De Keim, secretary of the committee.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

LET THE FARM BOARD DIE.

Bills are now pending in congress to advance more hundreds of millions of dollars through the Reconstruction Finance corporation to the farm board. The board started with an appropriation of half a billion dollars, of which, it is commonly supposed, perhaps 50 million dollars is left, with wheat and cotton at their present levels. The rest is gone forever. With that record the farm board is not what might be regarded as a prime credit risk.

The voting of another dollar to the farm board would be an unforgivable blunder. The present huge carryover of wheat which is depressing the American market is the direct result of the farm board's mistaken theory that the way to increase the income of the farmers is to buy and store their produce. It is now abundantly clear that any advantage which this buying creates temporarily is lost the moment the purchase is completed. The grain thus bought remains, hanging over the market to depress the price of oncoming crops. Meanwhile a temporary increase in prices has stimulated production, both at home and abroad, with the final result that the problem of excess production is intensified.

Representatives of agricultural states in congress have gone on the theory that the farmers are demanding the continuance of the farm board. There is no evidence that that is so. Mr. Brookhart was counted among the most ardent supporters of farm board policies. The dirt farmers in Iowa could have renominated him, and would have renominated him, if they had wanted to indorse the farm board's efforts.

CANCELLATION—REPUDIATION.

Cancellation of war debts means repudiation by European debtors of their obligations to the United States, though repudiation is a shorter and uglier word which is not used by its proponents. But repudiation by Europe by shifting the heavy burden of the war debts to the United States may mean repudiation here. We have been learning of late that congress is no more just or honest than parliament or the chambre des députés.

POLITICS IN THE CHURCHES.

The invasion of the Third Presbyterian church by seven young men who undertook to heckle the speaker, Bishop Cannon, was as stupid as it was offensive to all right minded people, whatever their opinions on prohibition. But the rebuke of the pastor of the church lacked something of candor and accuracy. "This is a house of worship," he said. "You can't break up a religious service this way." The fact was that while the Third Presbyterian church is a house of worship and the proceedings were accompanied by prayer, the meeting was a political meeting and the purpose was not worship but political action.

This very unpleasant event was in no sense an invasion of religious service and cannot be distorted into that semblance. But people of true piety and religious feeling may well ponder it as warning of the inevitable results of the exploitation of religious organization for political purposes. If churches wish to be respected as houses of worship they will remain houses of worship. They cannot turn themselves into places of political assembly and at the same time expect to be regarded with the reverence due religion.

In fact, there has been nothing more deplorable from the standpoint of those who would have religion respected and its influences in the nation maintained than the effort of political clergymen to make use of the churches for political objects and the imposition upon the body politic of their notions of political and moral expediency. A very large and we believe increasing body of church members, including the clergy itself, do not favor prohibition law and they resent the efforts of its advocates to utilize religious organization as an instrumentality of politics. This is no other than the dominance of the state by the church, a device whose deplorable consequences in history the founders of this republic remembered in their zealous, and they sought to protect posterity from any renewal of those misfortunes. We are confident Americans of today, though they are farther away from them, have no wish to have them return.

THE BONUS TRICK.

The bonus probably would not even have come to bat in Washington, much less ever getting to first base, if the congressional proponents and backers of it had thought of themselves as taking responsibility for the accomplished fact, for the legislation and the actual payment of the money. They traded on the certainty of an obstruction. Either the senate or the President would prevent the signing of the contract and the fulfillment of its terms. If the senate failed, the veto would dispose of the affair. Meanwhile the supporters of the bonus, having escaped accountability, would gain such political profits as they could, being friends of the veteran.

This trick of legislation is, unfortunately, as common as it is unworthy. It permits one outfit of politicians to acquire what they think is merit by throwing upon more responsible persons in government the need of stopping something which should not have been started.

The intriguers not only light a fire which, as they know, must be extinguished by other persons, but they endeavor to raise a moral reproach against the rescue. They deal in false sentiment and unfair political action, filling out the whole boundary of demagogy. The relief of veterans is one of the high obligations of any country. It should be scrupulously respected, but also scrupulously protected. It is exposed to fraud and usually each fraud rebounds to hurt some person entitled to what others have taken.

The demand for the complete adjustment of compensation at this time was stimulated by men seeking acclaim. It was to be expected that thousands of service men, hit by the general economic conditions, would think of such relief as a godsend, would not consider how little, relatively, it would mean to them or how much it might retard the recovery from what ails them and the rest of the country. They saw the life belt and did not know it was filled with lead.

The congressional manipulators of this natural sentiment cannot be excused as the service men can. They knew what they were doing and did it only because they relied upon prevention somewhere along the line.

PAY A LITTLE TAX AND YOU GO TO JAIL.

The federal government in its new bill taxes wort, malt extract, and grape concentrate. It hopes to raise something just under $100,000,000 in revenue from the free use of these makings of intoxicating beverages by citizens, although it frequently urges them to respect the law. Mr. Lidikewicz, the Chicago janitor who spent sixty days in jail on a federal court sentence for using these now taxable ingredients, will never be able to get a clear idea of the government's moral purpose, but he knows that if he ever again has the courage to make himself some beer he'll be helping out in the revenue emergency, even if it puts him back in jail.

Mr. Grein, our city sealer, may also be confused as to the moral purpose. Some time ago the government seized the goods in his store. They included sauerkraut juice, tomato juice, corkscrews, malt compounds, etc. The malt commodities were the contraband sought in the raid, but everything else was carted away on some theory of contamination. The department of justice is now trying to libel these goods and finally deprive Mr. Grein of possession and profit.

If they were returned to him and he sold them a tax would be paid the federal government, which must get the revenue from the illegal making of intoxicating beverages thus levied upon or the budget will not be balanced.

Apparently the government is suffering from a compound fracture of the moral intelligence.

Editorial of the Day

THE SABINE FARM.

[Boston Transcript.]

Horace, most "modern" of all the classic poets, and last of the lyric poets of ancient Rome, was, like some other men of letters, a sophisticated city dweller who was very fond of the country. The place on earth which he loved most was the farm which Maecenas gave him among the Sabine hills, northeast of Tibur, where he lived modestly as a retired literary man not above the occupations of a real dirt farmer; where he entertained his many bookish friends out of his "good contemporary cask," without extravagance or dissipation; and where he seems to have spent rather more time in the reverent contemplation of jagged Soracte, the mountain of his love, than he did even in the agreeable occupation of writing immortal odes and brilliant metrical satires.

Horace's little Sabine domain is probably the most famous farm of literature. It has not been difficult to locate the site of it, and it has long been a place of pilgrimage for the poet's admirers, who are probably, taking the world through, as numerous today as they were in the time of Augustus.

It is therefore not very surprising that an American archeologist has succeeded, by the aid of an Italian corps of workers, in unearthing the authentic foundations of Horace's Sabine residence. It appears in this revelation as a house that was not at all palatial, but which surely must have been comfortable and well adapted to the poet's mingling of rustic and refined tastes, and to the unpretentious but thoroughly cheerful entertainment which he there provided for his friends.

Horace, besides being a very delightful poet, was a connoisseur of wines. His chaste tributes to the Falernian vintage prove that. But he was no voluminary; it is probable that some of his bibulous lucubrations were purely literary. The critics, indeed, are inclined to think that the love affairs which he appears to reveal in his odes and elsewhere were imaginary—that even the alluring Lalage was a poet's dream. However this may be, Horace was a man of moderation; nor could he, we may be assured, have achieved a life work so invariably marked by the quality of measure, of infinite grace joined with fine reserve, if he had been given to gross indulgence. The son of a man who had been a slave, and who consequently was of the humblest social rank, he became the valued associate of men of the highest place in one of those rare epochs when emperors and statesmen were judicious and inspiring patrons of literature. This child of a freedman was recognized as a prince of the intellect, an arbiter of literary taste. He earned his Sabine villa at the hands of a munificent patron; and the excavated residence, or what remains of it, should be a place of pilgrimage for a generation that finds his odes and satires as fascinating today as the bookish Romans of that gracious period just before the birth of Christ found them. We read that an epoch of decadence in Augustus' day, comparable with the sentiment of our own century, explains the revived appreciation of Horace. If this assumption is a just one, it is plain that we need not worry deeply about our decadence if its prevalence assimilates us to the period in which Horace and Virgil lived and wrote.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

A CAT AT BARABOO, WIS., was torn from her newborn family and given to a man who lived thirty-five miles away, and what do you think? The cat came back. Not an exciting piece of news, a thing that has happened before and will probably happen again, and yet somehow a piece of news that seems as fresh and welcome as a cool, gentle breeze blowing across the desert. When anybody yesterday talked to us about the 18th amendment, the attitude of Mr. Hoover on the dry plank, the prospect of Gov. Roosevelt being the Democratic candidate, or asked us if we thought the depression would be over by next Monday at half past three, we told them the story about the cat walking back thirty-five miles to Baraboo, Wis. By repeating the quaint little incident to them several times we finally managed to get their minds off the burning issues of the day. And by keeping at it and pounding away we succeeded in some cases in getting them to think enough about the Baraboo cat to make them say something about it. Some of them thought the story was untrue. They said that if the cat had ever lived in Baraboo she would never walk back to the place, she wouldn't even hitch hike back.

Others attempted to dismiss the story by saying: "Oh, Baraboo is in Michigan, isn't it, or is it Maine? We went through Baraboo in the car two summers ago. I'd ask the chauffeur what state it's in, but we had to let him go, and we're doing our own driving now and we never can remember where Baraboo is. But speaking of the convention . . ." At which point we would sternly interpose and say nobody was speaking of the convention, we were talking of a cat at Baraboo that walked back home thirty-five miles. It's a hard job, but we're going to hang on to that Baraboo cat until we find something else with which to change the subject.

DEDUCTION.

I've drudged and drunk with devils,
I've argufied with priests,
I've sold my soul to artists,
I've sat through dismal feasts

With dumb and owl-eyed Babbitts,
I've sung till morning hours
With geniuses and morons,
I've seen this world of ours

In sunshine and in shadow,
In happiness and pain,
On seas of moonlit beauty,
Through clouds of weeping rain.

I've loved intriguing ladies,
I've lived . . . and now I am
Forced to the sane conclusion—
It isn't worth a damn!

E. LESLIE SPAULDING.

DR. CHASE down at Illinois calls on the college graduates to "right a sick world." It maybe isn't so much that the world is sick as that the financiers and European and South American stock dumping, and the statesmen down in Washington and the era of prohibition despotism have given it a severe pain in the neck. Sickness is often susceptible of a cure, but a pain in the neck? Ah, not even the college graduates can do much for that.

THE NEWSPAPERS are full of the phrases "reasonable drys" and "reasonable wets." Gentlemen—there is no sich animule!

Just Getting Worse and Worse.

Sir: While I was washin' the supper dishes last night, on account of Gert goin' to a bridge party, Don drops in lookin' awful worried, so I mixes him a drink an' asks him what's the matter an' he says, "Aw, Adele went to another movie tonight an' every time she goes to a movie she gets the dangest ideas. When she seen the 'Connecticut Yankee' I had to wear a suit of armor to a masquerade an' last week she seen Doug Fairbanks playin' polo and now I gotta wear a polo hat an' tonight I'm scared to death 'cause she went to see 'Tarzan the Ape Man.'"

THAT OTTAWA FELLA.

A GENTLEMAN at Shelton, Conn., refused to leave jail when his term expired. He said he liked it there and he proposed to stay. The "Bigger and Better Jails" movement must be working well down in Connecticut.

"WE FARMERS," says the prince of Wales. But the world will never believe Edward David is a farmer until he falls off a haystack. But just give him a haystack and put him on it and he will, he will.

SONG AGAINST FUTILITY.

High-flying,
Listen, listen close—
The waves are crying!)

Tell me, moaning sea waves,
You who have traveled far,
Have you captured the moon,
Or one white star?
Man is kindred to you,
Restless blue waves;
He cannot reach the stars,
The stars, he craves.
If Man and waves would cease
To tear themselves apart,
Would each find that the stars
Shine in his heart?

(Hawks, black hawks,
Low-flying,
Listen, listen close—

CARE OF THE NEARSIGHTED EYE.

D. A. wants to know if there is any way to improve nearsightedness except by wearing glasses.

The question cannot be answered in the affirmative unless we add enough qualifications to practically change the answer.

Wearing glasses that meet the requirements so far overshadows all other measures of relief that these other measures are regarded as of small importance. Glasses that meet the requirements are those which cause the sight image to fall just where it should in the eye, and make it possible to see clearly without eyestrain and fatigue.

The textbooks used in the grades of the public schools compare the eye with the well known camera. Since most school children know how a camera is built and how it works, and some of them have taken the thing to pieces and know its anatomy, the comparison is a good one. It is an easy way of explaining the eyeball, which grade pupils are not supposed to pull apart. However, the comparison holds only up to a certain point.

When one wishes to sharpen the image on the camera plate he turns a screw which moves the plate forward or backward until it finds just the position in which the image is clearest. In the case of the human eye there is no screw to move the retina curtain forward or backward. To sharpen a blurred image the shape of the lens is changed by means of certain small muscles, located within the eyeball and not on its outside, called the ciliary muscles. To relieve these small muscles from fatiguing and often impossible tasks we make use of glass lenses of one kind or another.

The theory of exercise of the eyes, by rolling them in various directions, is based on the notion that the large muscles which rotate the eyeball squeeze it into unusual shapes. Really, these six muscles pull the eyes in different directions; they are not placed so as to squeeze the ball, nor are they attached in locations which would make for pulling it into different shapes. They are there to aim the line of vision toward the object looked at, and they do that with the smallest possible amount of pull or squeeze on the ball itself.

The nearsighted eye is one that is too long from front to back. The lens focuses the image in front of the retina instead of on it. Why this is cannot be satisfactorily explained. Some say that the bony eye socket is too deep and narrow, but that is a poor explanation. Nature builds the body lavishly always and everywhere, and the eye socket is so much too large for the eyeball that the amount of orbital fat required for packing is considerable.

We say that nearsightedness, or long eyeball, is congenital, or that it is a peculiarity of the program of growth in a given case. But to say that is to state a fact or two, rather than to explain. There is a variety of nearsightedness which tends to be progressive, to get worse, until vision is lost. This fact proves that something somewhere can slowly change the shape of the eyeball. Could we find out what it is, we would be in a better position to figure out some way to change the shape of eyeballs in the other direction.

All that we can say now is that the person with nearsighted eyes should wear the kind of lenses that are needed to focus the image on his retina; that these lenses should be set before his eyes in the correct position; that they should be worn steadily. Of some secondary importance is regard for eye hygiene. This means using the right kind of illumination for eye work, holding the work properly, and refraining from eye straining work. If one wishes to spend some time daily in rolling the eyes around, I know of no harm in doing so.

PIGMENTATION.

Miss A. S. writes: Recently I have noticed the skin under my arms becoming dark. As I usually wear a sleeveless dress, it is very embarrassing. Can you suggest a remedy?

REPLY:

This type of pigmentation is generally attributed to a form of ringworm. You may be able to kill the parasite by applying a saturated solution of hyposulphite of soda, or some other sulphur compound. You may be able to bleach the skin with some of the bleaches used by women.

LEGS ARE SKINNY.

G. P. writes: I have tried to develop my legs between the calf and ankle. I am more than average weight for my height and age, but cannot seem to add any flesh to my legs. They are developed, so far as muscles are concerned—in fact, too much so. They are extremely thin, which makes the muscles in the calf quite pronounced. In fact, they are shaped like a man's. I am greatly embarrassed because of this and have given up swimming.

Could you suggest some exercise or light treatment, or is there some glandular disturbance which prevents some of my weight going to that part?

REPLY.

You are built that way, and there is not much chance that you will ever be different. Toe, clog, and tap dancing build up the calves, but it is the muscle that is increased. They decrease fat. Should you try to remedy your shape by getting fat, or even obese, the probability is that your lower legs would never get much of the fat. I wonder if you are not unduly concerned? Slim legs are greatly in favor.

TONSILS AND LUMPS.

Mrs. J. S. writes:

1. When granules or yellow lumps with an offensive odor come up from the throat would it mean the tonsils should necessarily be removed or could it be from other sources?
2. Would this cause an offensive breath?
3. The odor is particularly offensive when crushed.
4. Would this condition also be the cause of the voice sounding blurred as though one were holding something in the mouth while speaking?

REPLY.

1. No. The tonsils can be emptied by massage or suction. The pockets can be sl or the tonsils removed.
2. Yes, such granules often cause halitosis.
3. That is usual. They contain an offensive bacillus.
4. No.

MARRIAGE OF COUSINS.

R. L. writes: Can first cousins marry?

REPLY.

The marriage of first cousins is prohibited in some states, but not in others. Licensing to marry is a question of the exercise of police power, and most persons think that proper. The national government has no police power. So much for "can they marry?"

Whether first cousins should marry depends on the freedom from inheritable disease and defects of the contracting parties and their parents.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 14, 1916.

St. Louis, Mo.—Efforts to preserve harmony and prevent impending defections from Democratic ranks and to inaugurate an impressive campaign against the Republican ticket occupied the attention of the leaders on the eve of the assembling of the national convention today. William Jennings Bryan, suspected of being a potential candidate for President in 1920, arrived and announced he is going to fight nobody in this convention, will not even appear before the resolutions committee, and will take the stump for Wilson in August.

PETROGRAD.—The war office announcement says that the retreat of the Austro-Hungarian and German troops along the Galician front is proceeding so rapidly that only a small number of prisoners has been captured in addition to those previously reported. The total is given as about 115,700, as compared with approximately 114,700 announced yesterday.

LONDON.—Canadian troops, in what the British official statement described as a "gallant and successful assault" southwest of Zillebeke, recaptured a former British position over a front of more than 1,500 yards. Notwithstanding a severe shelling the Canadians retain the ground gained, which is being consolidated.

PARIS.—During the day fighting in the Verdun sector calmed down to light artillery actions, the French official report says. The fighting of yesterday and last night, however, was violent, particularly on the front west of Thiaumont farm. The Germans, according to the report, succeeded in entering some advanced trenches at one point, but were repulsed elsewhere.

CHICAGO.—One motorcycle policeman, Herman Malow, 723 Lombard avenue, Oak Park, was killed and another, Thure Lindhe, 210 Marion street, Oak Park, was shot and seriously wounded by three highway bandits who had held up an automobile party, stripped two women of $2,000 worth of jewels and escaped in the auto of the ones they robbed.

Every Man's University

Questions and answers prepared by members of the faculty of the University of Chicago outline what they consider a well educated person ought to know. Today's instructor is Merle C. Coulter, professor of botany.

TODAY'S QUESTION.

Are all men created "free and equal"?

YESTERDAY'S QUESTION.

Which is the more important, heredity or environment?

ANSWER.

Neither. If the gasoline motor is to run it must have both gasoline and spark. Which, then, is more important, the gasoline or the spark? If the corn plant is to have the green color which enables it to live, it must be endowed with certain hereditary units. Also it must be supplied with certain environmental influences, notable among which is light. In the absence of either the hereditary units or the light, the corn plant will be white. If a man is to achieve normal intellectual development his hereditary equipment must contain certain necessary genes. Also he must receive the proper environmental influence, an education.

These examples are not exceptional. A certain heredity and a certain environment are required for every character in every organism. In this very fundamental sense, then, neither heredity nor environment is more important, for both are absolutely necessary. But, of course, the differences between two organisms may be due to heredity, or to environment, or to both.

UNFINISHED STRUCTURE.

Chicago, June 10.—[Friend of the People.]—Next door to my property is a nine story building which remains uncompleted. Big boys climb up on the topmost floors and throw down planks. My tenants have small children that play in the yard and are afraid they will be harmed. I have called the police but have had no help. Where can I go to see if the owners can be compelled to board up the first floor of the building so these boys will be unable to gain entrance? M. E. S.

All work on the building in question was stopped in November, 1929, on account of financial troubles of the builder. We have found no one as yet who will acknowledge responsibility for the condition of the building or will provide safeguards for the public. Although the situation seems to be almost hopelessly involved, we shall continue our efforts to make the premises safe.

JOHN E. ERICSSON,
Deputy, Department of Buildings.

GAMBLING DEVICES.

Chicago, June 10.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Is there any way one can compel a storekeeper who has gambling machines in his store to limit the age of his prospective victims? Mere babies are now taught the manly art of gambling. Some are penny machines, some nickel machines. My young son played one last week. In this case the highest number at the end of the week wins a dollar. 2. If that isn't out and out gambling, what is it? These youngsters get money by hook or crook to play. 3. Can you suggest something to remedy this evil? C. D.

1. You might experiment with a suit to recover the money. Such recovery is authorized by statute.
2. We agree with you that it is gambling and that it is illegal.
3. See No. 1.

HYDE'S REFERENDUM DECOY

[St. Louis Post-Dispatch.]

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Writers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Address Voice of the People, The Tribune.

DIVIDING THE OPPOSITION.

Chicago, June 10.—In a TRIBUNE editorial today, entitled "An Honest Resolution and a Hypocritical One," attention is directed to a resolution pertaining to the eighteenth amendment proposed for the Republican convention, containing the "trick words," "retained, repealed, or modified."

Recalling an election in Ontario several years ago, when the question of wet or dry was voted on, I can bear witness that THE TRIBUNE point is well taken.

The voters of Ontario were given an opportunity to express themselves on three proposals, each of which referred to changes in the prohibition act of that province, but drafted in such a way that the "moists, damps, and wets" were required to vote in separate groups. None of the groups was in a majority and the election was lost to those favoring legal sale of intoxicating beverages.

Two years later a single proposal was voted on and resulted in the passage of the present Ontario provincial liquor act, which provides for the sale of beer, ale, porter, and similar beverages containing not to exceed 4 per cent alcohol and the rationing of liquors and wines from provincial government warehouses. In the latter election a fair expression of sentiment on the prohibition question was obtained. If the proposed resolution to the Republican convention is embodied in the party platform and later voted upon the electorate will be confused and its proponents embarrassed.

THOMAS A. CANTY.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH.

Chicago, June 6.—I should like to suggest to "An Alumnus" of the U. of C. that he read the first amendment to the constitution and find that "Congress shall make no law abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press"; and that, by article III., section 3, "Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort." If any one can prove William Z. Foster is adhering to and giving aid and comfort to agencies prepared for armed conflict with our nation, then, and not before, can he be convicted of treason.

I, too, am becoming ashamed of the University of Chicago when I find that among its graduates are persons who do not believe in free speech, who would organize efforts to run communists out of the country, and who seem to worship the capitalistic system as the eternal symbol of virtue.

I am only an undergraduate in engineering at the University of Illinois, but I do hope our great University of Chicago shall continue to graduate mainly a liberally educated group, as it has in the past, who can weigh accurately the substance in the lectures given at Mandel hall, who are open to all ideas, both new and old, and who can enrich both their own lives and those of others by their truly liberal education. ROBERT E. STEWART JR.

A PLEA TO MERCHANTS.

Chicago, June 6.—The way to end the present depression is to call a meeting of the heads of the leading chain stores, department stores, mail order houses, and other large retail and wholesale establishments and have them agree to stop their present ruinous practice of buying in ridiculously small quantities and carrying an abnormally small stock. Merchandise is sold today at ruinous prices, but by placing normally sized orders and being willing to carry a fair sized stock—depending on financial ability—factories would immediately get busy and would be able to give employment to millions with resulting increase in buying power and advance in prices. The retail stores are the backbone of all business and by getting the larger and financially strong ones together and have them use their united purchasing power at once they no doubt would be able to stop the decline in commodity prices and lead the country back to normal business activities. A. R.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH INSTITUTE.

Chicago, June 4.—May I express the attitude of the Julius Rosenwald fund in connection with the medical advisory board of the Public Health institute, the dissolution of which was just reported in THE TRIBUNE? Officers of the fund took the initiative two years ago in bringing the trustees of the institute together with a small group of distinguished physicians of Chicago whom the trustees subsequently appointed as a medical advisory board. We set before the joint group three purposes which it was thought the formation of the board might serve, namely, improving the quality of the institute's medical work, improving the institute's advertising, and furthering coöperation with organized medical interests.

Two of these tasks have been accomplished. The medical board stated in its public report for 1931 that the "institute conducts the treatment of venereal patients in an exceedingly efficient and thoroughly honest way." These medical men have also improved the institute's advertising and have formulated policies, published in the same report, which they believe render advertising a useful, effective and ethical adjunct in combating the dangers of venereal disease in a large city.

The third purpose of bringing about satisfactory coöperation with the Chicago Medical society has not been accomplished. The society has ceased to criticize the institute's medical work, but has insisted on restriction of advertising to a degree which both the medical board and the trustees consider unjustifiable. The experience of the institute has proved that advertisements bring large numbers of people to secure treatment who would not otherwise have obtained any good care for the prevalent, communicable and expensive diseases to which the institute's work has been confined. The issue is whether the medical society will recognize that the legitimate and necessary restrictions upon individual or commercial advertising must be altered in order to enable the community to cope effectively with a public health menace.

The fund is interested in seeing good medical service extended without charity and without profit to persons of moderate means and has therefore participated, though not financially, in this situation. MICHAEL M. DAVIS,
Director for Medical Services, Julius Rosenwald Fund.

SEDITIOUS PREACHINGS.

Chicago, June 6.—Will you please explain why the University of Chicago allowed a man with the well known reputation for seditious preachings as William Z. Foster is the use of the school to spread his teachings and advocate the overthrow of our government by force? What is the matter with the university to permit such a thing? You gave some publicity to his speech and I have watched daily for an editorial from you expressing your disapproval and resentment, but so far none has appeared. Does silence on the part of THE TRIBUNE mean acquiescence?

You have given considerable space to criticisms of the Wisconsin university for their socialistic teachings, but never have I read of such seditious talk in any school or university in the United States as Foster was allowed to make. At a time like this, when everything possible should be done to prevent class hatred, allowing Foster and his ilk the use of the Chicago university to spread communism is beyond the understanding of any decent American citizen.

MISS BELLE OLSEN.

TAXES IN WISCONSIN.

South Milwaukee, Wis., June 7.—You are absolutely wrong about the unemployment relief bill in Wisconsin. As passed by the legislators it is not the bill that Gov. La Follette proposed, which was a soak the rich bill, but the present bill is one that was a compromise, forced on the public by the opponents of the governor.

So, if any one is to blame for the common people coming in for their share please hang it onto the necks of the governor's opponents. L. M.

ALLOWS STATE TO USE BAIN'S RECORDS IN TRIAL

Judge Denies Motion to Suppress Evidence.

CRIMINAL COURT.

George Stelling, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in the penitentiary; John McArthur, larceny, sentenced to 1 to 10 years in Pontiac reformatory by Judge Rudolph Desort.

South Park Commissioner John Bain, former head of a chain of twelve banks, lost the first skirmish yesterday in the trial in which he and five others are charged with conspiracy to defraud the public of $300,000. Judge John M. O'Connor overruled a motion to suppress the evidence contained in Bain's personal records and permitted the state to introduce these records.

Bain, his two sons, John H. and Robert A., his son-in-law, W. Merle Fisher, Frank Mulholland, south side real estate man, and Dr. Walter H. Buhlig, were indicted on several counts, but yesterday Special Prosecutor Edwin J. Raber elected to proceed on the conspiracy indictment. The first move by Attorney Francis X. Busch, representing the defendants, was to seek to exclude Bain's records.

Defense Lawyer's Argument.

Under the law no man may be compelled to give evidence against himself. Attorney Busch contended that Bain was compelled by Judge Michael Feinberg to produce his books in court during a search for assets of the closed banks. Because of that forced surrender, Bain was put in the position of being compelled to give evidence that might be used against him, the lawyer said, and therefore the records should be suppressed.

Prosecutor Raber argued that there had been no unlawful seizure, that Judge Feinberg had the right to inspect the records and that they were then voluntatrily given to the prosecutor. James J. Gammonley, 6104 South Bishop street, Bain's personal bookkeeper, testified that by order of Judge Feinberg he went to Bain, who was then ill in the German Deaconess hospital, and that Bain consented to placing the records before Judge Feinberg. Judge O'Connor held that this voluntary action by Bain rendered the records admissible.

Mr. Raber said he would call 700 or 800 witnesses during the trial, which may last most of the summer. Mr. Busch demanded a complete list of all witnesses to be used by the state, and Raber promised to give it. That ended the preliminary moves, and Judge O'Connor said he would be ready to hear testimony tomorrow in the court in the county building.

At the trial of Alexander and Samuel Flower, brothers, who formerly operated the Roosevelt Bankers' State bank and who are charged with making false statements to bank examiners, Max Alexander, a south side butcher, testified that he had signed an accommodation note for $20,000 at the request of Alexander Flower. The note was executed just before bank examiners made their last inspection of the bank, and it was listed on the books as an asset.

The witness said he did not receive money for the note, that he was not expected to pay it nor to pay interest. John Cuden, bank examiner, said this note and others aggregating $60,000 were issued with the intent of deceiving the examiners.

Describes False Statement.

John A. Hunniford, formerly assistant cashier of the bank, testified for the state that Alexander Flower directed him to make a false financial statement concerning the South Park Investment company, a subsidiary of the bank. He said Flower told him to have his wife sign the statement with her maiden name, so that the concern's relationship with the bank would not be apparent.

The statements showed assets of $40,000, when the actual assets were only $1,000, Hunniford testified. He said Alexander Flower then made a loan of $12,500 of the bank's money to the investment company but that the money was deposited in Flower's personal bank account.

The trial, which is being held in the court of Judge Philip L. Sullivan, will continue today.

OFFER MADE TO BANK TO RETURN STOLEN BONDS FOR REWARD

Minneapolis, Minn., June 13.—(AP)—The Northwestern National bank has been offered return of $140,000 in stolen negotiable securities on payment of $8,000, private detectives handling an investigation of the holdup said today.

The securities, said operatives of the detective agency, were stolen from the Local North American branch of the Northwestern National on March 29.

Police also asserted they knew of the offer, made by a man in a telephone conversation from Chicago.

The man, whose name was not revealed, said he could "put his hands on what was left of the bonds" taken in the holdup, in which seven men held up 24 persons.

Detectives quoted the Chicago man as saying three men, found slain near Mitchell, Ill., early in April had nothing to do with the holdup.

Bank officials would not comment but the operatives said nothing had been done to accept the offer.

HAWAII ACCUSES U. S. ARMY MAN IN ATTACK CASE

HONOLULU, June 13.—(AP)—Police today charged Sergt. E. C. Carden, 24, United States army, with attempted criminal assault on complaint of a 20 year old Japanese girl.

Two witnesses said they rescued the girl Friday night from Carden. She told police that after a number of drinks she lost consciousness. Carden denied the charge.

Police said the case probably would be turned over to the military authorities.

HAUSNER STILL WEAK; SENDS HIS WIFE RADIOGRAM

New York, June 13.—[Special.]—Mrs. Martha Hausner, wife of the rescued ocean flyer, received a brief message from him today at the home of her brother, Walter Wages, in Jersey City. A report from Capt. Wilson of the steamship Circle Shell said the aviator was still too weak to give a coherent account of his experiences.

"I feel that Capt. Wilson can be trusted to do what is best for him," Mrs. Hausner said. "I am very happy and feel I have every reason to be. I am indeed grateful to Capt. Wilson and also to Father Knapper, who was one of the few who shared my belief that my husband would be returned to me."

She added that she planned a dinner of steak and mushrooms, the flyer's favorite dish, to greet him when he returned.

The Polish-American Civic league of Linden, N. J., plans to honor Hausner when he returns to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hausner. A reception committee will include Gov. A. Harry Moore, and the Rev. Edward Kozlowski, pastor of St. Theresa's church, where Hausner's mother prayed daily for the safety of her son.

NEWFOUNDLAND'S PREMIER OUSTED BY ANGRY VOTERS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., June 13.—Sir Richard Squires, prime minister of Newfoundland, has been turned out of office by an irate electorate. Returns from the general election held on Saturday showed that Sir Richard was defeated in Trinity South, while five of the candidates he supported in six other constituencies were also snowed under.

The returns gave the United Newfoundland party, headed by F. C. Alderdice, a smashing victory all along the line. F. Gordon Bradley, solicitor general, is the only government winner so far. The Squires candidates are trailing in nine other constituencies.

Alderdice ran up a substantial lead in St. John's West over a government candidate. Dr. H. M. Mosdell, independent, formerly a minister without a portfolio in the Squires cabinet but who resigned in a dispute with the prime minister, also won. He was unopposed. The defeat of Squires climaxed two attacks on the executive palace by angry mobs, who demanded that he resign. Some of the rioters threatened to throw him in the harbor, but he refused to quit.

GERMANY BOOSTS TAXES AND CUTS AID FOR JOBLESS

New Regime Lifts Ban on Fascist Army.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, June 13.—The government of Chancellor Franz von Papen today approved an emergency decree by which it hopes to save $124,000,000 a year by curtailing jobless relief, and to raise $95,000,000 through new taxation. The decree will be issued tomorrow.

The jobless dole will be reduced 23 per cent and will be paid for only thirteen weeks instead of twenty. Unmarried jobless persons have been receiving $9 a month. The Von Papen cabinet proposes to reduce this to $7.

"Crisis Relief" to be Cut.

The "crisis relief," which is a smaller support by the government after the dole payments are ended, will be cut 10 per cent.

When the payments by the federal government end, the local authorities step in with a still lower "welfare support." This, under the decree, will also be reduced fifteen per cent. The aggregate liabilities of the local authorities in respect to unemployment will be limited to $140,000,000. The federal government will pay the balance.

These reductions will not balance the unemployment relief budget. They leave $95,000,000 uncovered.

The crisis tax of one per cent on incomes is to be abolished. It will be replaced by a new surtax—additional to the income tax—ranging from 1½ per cent on incomes under $357 annually to 6½ per cent on incomes over $8,570. Government officials are to pay a flat rate of 1½ per cent above the income tax.

A salt tax of 20 per cent is expected to bring in $9,500,000 a year.

Provisions prepared by the former government of Dr. Heinrich Bruening to reduce the government subsidies for farmers and the junkers [landed aristocracy] and compel them to reorganize unprofitable farms do not figure in the Von Papen program as outlined tonight.

Laborites Are Aroused.

Laborites, who first appealed to their leaders to give the "all monocled" cabinet a chance to show what it could do, are rushing back to the Socialist and communist leaders, asking them to act against the "antisocial" government. The radical leaders remain reserved, convinced that Von Papen will further arouse the wrath of the laboring classes and help them swing an anti-Fascist movement.

Another decree to be issued tomorrow will again make Adolf Hitler's Fascist "storm troops" legal. The "Brown army" was dissolved by the Bruening government on April 13 on the ground that it constituted a "private army" and was a menace to the state. Four hundred thousand Nazis will again be permitted to wear uniforms, under the decree.

Ease Press Censorship.

Baron von Gayl, home minister, today announced that he will ease the restrictions against the newspapers. From now on, he said, newspapers will not be confiscated nor forbidden to appear on the streets because they endanger public law and order, but they "will be still liable to prohibition if they endanger the vital interests of the nation through false or distorted news."

The German broadcasting corporation has been appropriated by the new government for a half hour daily, when official spokesmen will go on the air to inform the public of the aims and intentions of the new government. Under the decree issued today, all broadcasting stations must reserve this time.

FALLS ASLEEP SMOKING; KILLED.

DRY AGENTS RAID CLUB

BEGIN RECOUNT OF BALLOTS IN 10TH DISTRICT

The recount of ballots cast in the Tenth congressional district primary for the Republican nomination to congress, ordered by Circuit Judge Thomas J. Lynch, was started yesterday in the offices of the election commission. The recount was asked by James Simpson Jr., who lost the nomination to Ralph E. Church by seventy-three votes on the official canvass of returns.

Only ten precincts in the 41st and 43d wards, were counted yesterday by the five team workers. The net results were a gain of 2 votes for Church, of 1 for Simpson, and a loss of 3 votes by Congressman Carl R. Chindblom, who was outdistanced by both his opponents in his race for renomination.

The recount was delayed for two hours by technical objections by Attorney John F. Tyrrell, counsel for Church. He objected to the employment of five teams of clerks, and demanded that the work be done by a single team. Attorney Urban A. Lavery, representing Simpson, charged Attorney Tyrrell with a desire to delay completion of the recount long enough to keep Simpson's name off the ballot in the November election even if he should be declared the eventual winner of the primary.

There are 344 Chicago precincts in the congressional district, which also includes Evanston, the north shore district of Cook county, and all of Lake county.

PATROL SERVICE OWNER HELD ON ROBBERY CHARGE

John Cramer, 29 years old, 646 West 64th street, owner and sole operator of a patrol service known as the South Side Merchants Protective association, was arrested yesterday by the Englewood police and identified as a robber.

The complainant was John W. Cook, 60 years old, 646 West 70th street. He reported that on June 6 he stopped a policeman in full uniform and asked him where he could buy an alcoholic drink. The policeman, later identified as Cramer, took him to a saloon near 59th street and Ashland avenue.

There Cook, his new friend, and a taxicab driver had several drinks. The alleged robbery occurred after the trio had left in the third drinker's taxicab. Cramer asserted there had been no robbery and that Cook spent his money treating the crowd.

FALL FROM BUILDING FATAL.

John Bicechi, 70 years old, 1516 Clybourn avenue, leaped or fell to his death from the fourth floor fire escape of the building where he lived last Monday night.

Active in Loop

Seven alleged wet spots in the loop, conveniently situated for convention visitors, were raided by prohibition agents last night on the eve of the Republican convention. Five places on the north side also were closed.

Deputy Dry Administrator A. E. Aman, who directed the mopup, denied that the raids were part of a move to dry up Chicago for the convention. He asserted they were routine activities. For several weeks, however, it has been common report that the local prohibition unit was expected to make Chicago arid for the two political meetings.

One of the loop places visited was the Oyster bar in the Planters hotel, 19 North Clark street, where beer was found on draught. George Sennentz, and not the hotel, is the reputed owner of the bar. Frank Shurentner and Clarence Gara, attendants, were arrested. The other loop raids were at Room 502, Woods Theater building, 36 West Randolph street; 224 North Dearborn street; Room 500, Crystal hotel, 72 West Randolph street; Room 604, 14 West Washington street; 64 West Randolph street; Room 209, 189 North Clark street, and the Hollywood club at 220 North Dearborn street. Ten prisoners were taken in the loop raids.

The north side raids were at 1847 Irving Park boulevard; the Picardy club, 4003 Broadway; 602 North Clark street; 49 East Grand avenue, and 3008 Broadway. Five men were seized in these raids.

PHONE COMPANY IS ACCUSED OF PADDING ACCOUNT

Karl E. Pholin, examiner of accounts for the Illinois commerce commission, yesterday took the witness stand in the court of Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson and testified that in January, 1930, the Illinois Bell Telephone company included in its depreciation fund 16½ million dollars to be expended in repair and replacement of office equipment. Although the money was entered on the books at that time, it was not be expended completely until 1934, Pholin said.

He was called as a witness for the city in the suit of the telephone company to restrain the Illinois commerce commission from enforcing its ruling of 1923, which lowered rates on certain types of telephone service.

ORDERS JURY TO HEAR BELLWOOD DAMAGE SUITS

Court Voids $160,000 Award Against County.

Circuit Judge Thomas J. Lynch yesterday set aside the seven Bellwood highway damage judgments which had been stipulated by Edmund Mulcahy and John Bolton, lawyers for the county highway department, without a jury trial.

JUDGE LYNCH.

The judgments gave the holders of seven plots of unimproved property in Harrison street in Bellwood a total of $160,000 for alleged damages to their property resulting from the lowering of the street level in front of their lots. The damages were an average of $178 a front foot, although the total worth of the lots, as appraised for taxes, was only $20 a front foot. The county board already has asked the state's attorney and the Chicago Bar association to investigate the transaction.

Judge Decides to Act.

"As a matter of fact," said Judge Lynch in vacating the judgments, "I decided after reading the newspaper story of this transaction that regardless of whether any action was taken before me I would vacate the judgments myself before Friday."

The request that the judgments be vacated was made by Hayden N. Bell, county tax attorney. He was accompanied into court by County Commissioners Walter J. La Buy, George A. Miller, Amelia Sears, and Grace Fleming.

Attorney Charles L. Trainor Sr., representing the property owners, objected to the action. He grew red faced and fell to shouting in the later stages of the hearing, charging that the county board's request was the work of "publicity seeking officials." When Commissioner Miller stepped forward to speak, Trainor demanded that he sit down, since he was not an attorney of record in the case.

"This man is a county commissioner and therefore a principal in this suit," said Judge Lynch. "He doesn't have to sit down."

"All the county board asks," said Commissioner Miller, "is that your honor set these judgments aside and allow a jury to pass upon the awards."

Demands Fraud Proof.

"When this matter came before me I was informed that both parties, the attorneys for both parties and the real estate experts had reached complete agreement, and that all that was necessary for the court was for it to act as a vehicle through which these judgments could be proved up. At that time I asked, 'What's the reason for the speed?' and I was told, 'The board will meet next Tuesday.'

"The court assumed that the attorneys had full authority to consent to these judgments. I relied upon their statements. My order will be that the judgments be vacated and the cases returned to the chief justice for reassignment."

Attorney Mulcahy did not appear in court. Attorney Bolton told Judge Lynch:

"Since my name has been involved in undue publicity in this case I want to do everything I can to straighten it out. If my motion will be of any help I heartily join these gentlemen in asking that the judgments be set aside."

Also Discusses Philippine Independence.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 13.—[Special.]—The senate today took up the McNary farm relief bill and the Hawes-Cutting Philippine independence bill. It dropped them again after three hours discussion apiece; for it expects to pass neither.

It joked over the farm bill and loitered over the Philippine bill at a night hearing.

The allotment plan in the farm bill caused the senate amusement. Under it the farm board could determine a domestic portion and a foreign portion for any crop. All farmers would be prohibited from selling domestically a greater proportion of their own crop than that fixed by the board for the whole commodity.

"Ludicrous and fantastic," were hurled at the plan, and Senator M. M. Logan [Dem., Ky.], topped off the talk by offering as a substitute for the bill a resolution providing that it should be the sense of the senate that "Justice shall flow like the waters and righteousness like a flood."

"My resolution will work as well as the bill," he explained.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg [Rep., Mich.], enlivened the discussion of the Philippines bill by reminding his colleagues that they owed a duty to the United States, as well as to the islands.

He wanted "no responsibility without authority," "no twilight zones of responsibility," and he warned lest a mistake in solving the question harm the prestige of the United States in the orient.

As a substitute for the Hawes-Cutting bill, he offered a measure calling for a twenty year probationary period, with a Philippine constitution at the end of that time, rather than at the beginning.

He also agreed with Senator David A. Reed [Rep., Pa.], that insular independence should be made contingent upon treaties guaranteeing Filipino integrity, signed by the various interested nations, in particular by Japan.

Hearing Held on Swift $4,000,000 U. S. Tax Claim

Hearings were started yesterday on the Federal Court of Claims suit of Swift & Co. and their affiliates for a tax refund of $4,023,982 from the federal government. A decision will be given in Washington. The suit is an outgrowth of the packers' successful petition to obtain the refund of $10,000,000 taxes paid in 1928. The present sum was held out by the government to settle claims now in dispute.

TAXPAYERS TALK OF VIOLENCE TO CURB HUEY LONG

'Show Him a Rope' Urges Leading Planter.

New Orleans, La., June 13.—[Special.]—Aroused citizens of Louisiana from the passes at the mouth of the Mississippi river to the red hills skirting the Arkansas border are moving along two sectors in opposition to Senator Huey P. Long, self styled "Kingfish" of the state. There was talk of rifles and ropes.

HUEY P. LONG. [Acme Photo.]

Tomorrow at Baton Rouge hundreds of taxpayers representing every parish will assemble and fight any plan to increase taxation and will demand that taxes be reduced instead of additional burdens being placed upon the people. Their protest, however, according to those well informed in the political machinations of the Kingfish will fall upon deaf ears. So far the Kingfish has been able to control the legislature and it is presumed that he will continue to do so.

Leads Protest Delegation.

From St. Landry parish, one of the largest in the state, a tremendous delegation is converging upon Baton Rouge. Among its leaders is John Wartell, one of the biggest planters in the state. Before leaving for Baton Rouge in an address he said:

"Long has got to be stopped from railroading his tax propositions. He can't continue to build up his political machine at the expense of the poor people of this state. How many of you men have Springfields?" Mr. Wartell asked. "Well, it's about time to use them. When peaceable methods fail, then it is time to use something else. I'll tell you how to get relief. A bunch of red blooded Americans can show the Kingfish a piece of rope and tell him to go back to Washington."

Similar protests were made at mass meetings all over the state.

Name Independent Delegates.

Long is also being hit from another quarter. Democrats from practically every parish in large numbers are holding a state convention in Shreveport tomorrow for the purpose of selecting delegates to the Democratic national convention in Chicago. Senator Long had named delegates to Chicago at a meeting of the state central committee here. Later when the convention was called he declared that he would read the participants out of the Democratic party. Edward Rightor, leading New Orleans lawyer, in reply said:

"Long should be read out of the party for high and deliberate treason. He knows that he had no right under the rules of the Democratic party of this state or any other state to handpick his delegates to the convention. This prerogative has always rested in the hands of the people and was so ruled at the Houston convention. The only reason that his delegates were not thrown out at that convention was because the opponents to Long's delegates were themselves illegally handpicked without conventions."

Former Govs. John M. Parker and J. Y. Sanders endorsed the stand of Mr. Rightor and joined him in saying: "Kingfish Long can go to blazes."

THOMAS STOPS FALLING HAIR

Hair in your comb and brush means that your scalp is not physically able to withstand the ravishing attacks of the baldness producing germs. Unless you immediately rid your scalp of these causes of abnormal hair fall, you are bound to become bald.

Thomas treatment overcomes the causes of falling hair and gently stimulates the tiny glands, deep in the scalp, which cause hair to grow normally. When Thomas treatment starts, hair fall stops, dandruff ends and hair grows again as Nature intended it should grow. Thomas treatment is reliable, dignified and proved by more than 16 years of success. Call today for a free scalp examination and learn more about this modern, precise method of scientific hair culture.

WORLD'S FINANCIERS ARE GOOD COMEDIANS, CHARLIE CHAPLIN FINDS

VANCOUVER, B. C., June 13.—(AP)—Charlie Chaplin believes the financiers are great comedians in the rôle of economists. The actor discussed economic conditions when he arrived here today from the orient, nearing the end of his round the world tour.

"I'm reputedly a comedian, but after seeing financial conditions of the world I have decided I'm as much an economist as financiers are comedians," he said.

"Financiers will have to take less profit and they will have to bet on a basis of larger volume of business and smaller return."

3 ARBITERS GIVE DECISION TO END HOSPITAL STRIKE

The board of arbitration appointed to end the strike of attendants at the Psychopathic hospital yesterday announced its decision. Under it all the strikers, as well as those attendants whose previous dismissal from the county hospital caused the walkout, will go back to work at reduced wages. As soon as the finding was announced Frank S. Shaw, president of the advisory board of the county hospital nurses' training school, which supervises the work of the attendants, announced that his group did not consider the arbitration binding.

The arbitration board was composed of Paul B. David, international vice-president of the Building Employés union; County Commissioner Marie Plumb and Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, a member of the board of the nurses' school. They voted to reinstate the 22 employés who were dismissed and the 46 strikers.

In order to preserve the economy measure which caused the dismissals, they provided that the salaries of the whole 68 shall not exceed the previous pay of the 46 strikers. This would reduce the pay of the attendants from a present scale of $70 to $90 a month to one of $47 to $60 a month. Mrs. Langworthy passed her vote in the final decision on the arbitration award.

After she had been empowered by the entire advisory board of the nurses' school to represent it in the arbitration, she said, she was instructed by Mr. Shaw to refrain from taking part and to demand that the matter be referred to a single referee. This the other members of the arbitration board refused to consider.

RAID INN WHICH APPEASED THIRST OF CONTINENTALS

Hackensack, N. J., June 13.—(AP)—Federal prohibition agents today raided the Mansion House, where officers of the continental army appeased their thirst in November, 1770, before the capture of half of Washington's army in Fort Washington.

It was in the same building that Washington paused with his remaining 3,000 men quartered about the city while the Hessians under Cornwallis stopped on the east bank of the Hackensack river.

The federal agents arrested Moe Katzman, former sportsman and amusement park operator, and his bartender, Samuel Brown, on charges of selling liquor. They were released in bond.

After shooting her daughter, the mother went to the kitchen, closed the doors, turned on the gas, and shot herself.

Chicago's... First Convention Hall

The Historic Wigwam

To house its first National Republican Convention, the people of Chicago enthusiastically erected the "Wigwam." Measuring 180 feet wide and 100 feet long, the Wigwam was well ventilated and well lighted. Here, in 1860, one of the most dramatic events in the history of the United States was enacted. Amid the wildest excitement, 'The Rail Splitter and Giant Killer of Illinois, Abraham Lincoln', was unanimously nominated for the Presidency.

Figures on income groups and Bulletin coverage from Philadelphia Newspaper Reader Survey----a survey prepared by the American Association of Advertising Agencies

There are 579,941 families in the Philadelphia Area whose incomes are $2,000 or over. The Philadelphia Bulletin is read by 68% of these families.

As the incomes increase, the percentage of families who read The Bulletin also grows: 62% read it in the $2,000 to $2,999 income group; 71% in the $3,000 to $4,999 group; 75% in the $5,000 to $9,999 group;

The Bulletin is Philadelphia's newspaper. It has grown, through thirty-seven years, by publishing a fine newspaper for Philadelphia homes; by being accurate, timely; by avoiding sensationalism in the handling of news.

Its circulation is all net paid, all responsive because it is based upon reading interest; not a single copy ever sold by premium, prize or contest.

558,184 net paid daily average during 1931. Two and one-half times the circulation of any other Philadelphia evening newspaper; greater than that of all morning newspapers combined.

And a sound business policy of keeping space rates low gives the Bulletin advertiser, today, the lowest advertising cost of any newspaper in America.

CHILE DECREES CAPITAL MUST SHARE PROFITS

New Finance Policy to Be "Benefits for All."

BY JOHN LIVINGSTONE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SANTIAGO, Chile, June 13.—Rolando Merino, premier of the newly established Socialist government of Chile, today took the oath as a new member of the revolutionary junta. He succeeds Carlos G. Davila, former ambassador to the United States, who resigned yesterday because his policy of moderation displeased more radical members of the government. Arturo Ruiz Mafei was appointed to the premiership.

"All financial problems will be ruled the same as under the commercial policy of Socialist Chile, establishing strict rules of distributing the benefits and profits of industry among the producing masses.

Capital Must Make Sacrifices.

"To obtain this true social justice it is necessary that those who in the past did nothing but profit must make sacrifices themselves. This is the way overproduction, as erroneously expressed, will disappear, as there is no lack of buying spirit, but a scarcity of currency.

"As to the Cosach nitrate combine, a $375,000,000 concern, owned largely by American capital, public opinion must not ask for immediate or violent action, as the nitrate problem is complex and delicate. In its legal formation and technical structure there are fundamentals which, to be modified, demand scrupulous study, due to the magnitude of interest.

"The aim of the government is to restore the nitrate industry within the bounds of justice to its former preponderant position in foreign markets. But this work calls for analysis and decisions which cannot be made immediately.

"No Personal Benefits."

As to the independent nitrate concerns, who pretend to obtain advantages, rights and other angles of fiscal interest, I can inform them that in all cases public and national interests will be consulted. Advantages, meaning personal benefits, will not be considered at any moment."

The finance minister said the Junta could guarantee that the present nitrate work would be maintained, but he said the Cosach organization would be obliged to hand over necessary letters of credit for foreign exchange.

Former Senator Aurelia Nunez Morgado was appointed superintendent general of the nitrate industry. Morgado is known as an active opponent of Cosach and other foreign interests.

The finance minister also announced that the Central bank, which the new government had declared fused with a newly formed state bank, would continue to function independently.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, June 13.—The situation in Santiago, capital of Chile, is reported here to be extremely tense as a result of the resignation of Carlos Davila from the Socialist junta which deposed Juan Esteban Montero from the presidency eight days ago.

Heavily censored dispatches, as well as travelers from Santiago, today said anything may happen. The fanaticism of Col. Marmaduke Grove, "strong man" of the junta, is said to be rapidly overriding the more moderate tendencies of Davila's associates in the new government.

Travelers declare a wave of communism is engulfing Chile and that most of the municipal councils in the principal cities have virtually been converted into workers' committees. The new council of Viña del Mar, Chile's aristocratic summer resort, opened proceedings by taking off their collars as a sign of their proletarian sympathies. One traveler said he witnessed a savage attack by self-styled "red guards" upon the aristocratic Union club of Santiago. The mob later smashed a number of street cars and raided the offices of non-Socialist newspapers.

BRITAIN AWAITS IRISH STAND ON IMPERIAL PARLEY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 13.—J. H. Thomas, secretary for dominions, today told the house of commons he is awaiting another communication from President de Valera of the Irish Free State dealing with the Irish government's position on the imperial economic conference due to open in Ottawa next month.

Meantime, he added, the position is exactly where it was last Friday, when the Anglo-Irish conversations over De Valera's determination to abolish the oath of allegiance to the British king ended in a deadlock.

In answer to a question whether it was feared Ulster would be merged with the Free State, Mr. Thomas asked the house to wait until Friday's debate.

"Until then we need have no apprehension and no sleepless nights," he said.

Fascist Tribunal Sends Five Foes of Mussolini to Prison

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, June 13.—Heavy prison sentences were imposed tonight upon five anti-Fascists by the special military tribunal for defense of the state. The men were accused of political activities against the government and of a plot to dynamite the Orient express train near Milan. Two prisoners were sentenced to 30 years, two were given 16 years, and one 15 years.

The trial was the curtain raiser of a week of proceedings before the military tribunal, which during the last nine months has heard charges against 600 individuals arrested for political crimes against the state. More than 400 have been sentenced to prison terms, ranging from one to thirty years.

Dancing Girl Faces Trial.

A group of nine, chief among whom are Domenico Bovori, Genoese manufacturer, and his mistress, Marguerita Blaha, an Austrian dancing girl, will go on trial tomorrow. The death penalty may be inflicted in this case, as four of the defendants are charged with plotting to kill Premier Mussolini.

On Thursday Angelo Sbardolleto, young Italian who was arrested on June 4 and confessed that he was seeking to assassinate Mussolini with two bombs and a revolver found on his person, will appear before the special tribunal. A death sentence will be asked.

The center of interest in tomorrow's trial is the Austrian dancing girl. She has made a confession which reveals the gay life she led with Bovoni in the Montmarte of Paris and later in Italy. Police alleged that she accompanied Bovoni on automobile trips last summer, when Bovoni is said to have planted thirteen bombs at Bologna, Turin, and Tuscany.

Sent to Italy from Abroad.

The case against the nine sets forth that they were sent to Italy by anti-Fascists in Paris to distribute anti-Fascist literature and that some of them were ordered to kill Mussolini. Imilio Lussu and Carlo Roselli, two Italians who escaped from the Lipari prison islands and now live in Paris, are mentioned in the process as among those instructing the emissaries.

Lussu, a former deputy from Sardinia, has written several articles telling of his troubles with the Fascist government. Two years ago Roselli escaped from the prison islands with Francesco Nitti, former premier of Italy, who published a book about his escape.

WAITS 65 YEARS AND GETS HER DIPLOMA FROM BATES COLLEGE

Lewiston, Me., June 13.—(AP)—An 86 year old woman, who waited 65 years for her diploma, received it today at Bates college.

The woman was Mrs. Sibyl Chase Ballard of Minneapolis, Minn., who completed her course at Bates in 1867, but failed to receive her degree because the college did not then confer them on women. Bates now is a co-educational institution.

Honorary degrees awarded included: Doctor of laws, William Cameron Forbes of Boston, former ambassador to Japan; and doctor of humane letters, to Robert Lincoln Kelly of Leonia, N. J., former president of Earlham college and now executive secretary of the Association of American Colleges.

PLANE'S LANDING GEAR IS BROKEN; 7 ABOARD SAVED

LIMA, Peru, June 13.—(AP)—Donald Terry, commercial pilot flying six passengers from Canete, Peru, dropped a note to officials of the Faucett landing field today notifying them that he had broken his landing gear on the takeoff and would have to alight on the water. The ship was not equipped with pontoons.

Obeying Terry's sunggestion, field officials notified the naval aviation force at Ancon. When the plane came down just off shore they were ready with small boats.

All the passengers, including a woman, were saved. The plane was taken ashore before it became waterlogged.

FEAR FRANCE AND BRITAIN SEEK TO END ARMS PARLEY

Ministers in Geneva on Way to Lausanne.

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, June 13.—Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain and Premier Herriot of France, the pair who in 1924 brought Europe to the crest of a wave of Wilsonian idealism, came tonight to a greatly changed Geneva to find the disarmament conference anxious lest they are planning to kill it.

Most particularly are the German and Italian delegations anxious, and they got together for long powwows today. The result was that the Germans got out a memorandum reiterating their minimum demands, which were voiced at the beginning of the conference—equality in treatment, drastic reduction in arms or a removal of the ban on them for Germany, and a substitution for article V. of the Versailles treaty.

Italy Stands Pat.

The Italians, while insisting they had made no commitments with the Germans, stand firm. They say their original demands are for a big cut in arms and they prefer the conference openly declared a flat failure to seeing some trick ending devised.

The new realists—Herriot and MacDonald—are the authors of the Geneva protocol of 1924, which called upon the signatories to apply, in event of aggression, all existing sanctions the aggressor. A British conservative government, like that now captained by MacDonald killed it.

MacDonald and Herriot came in from Paris and were met by 100 members of their own delegations and journalists. There were feeble cries of "Viva Herriot," but none of that massive enthusiasm that marked his entry in the hopeful days of the league of nations.

Hint at Adjournment.

MacDonald made it plain that the Lausanne conference on reparations, war debts and other financial problems, which opens Thursday, is his central interest, but what agreement he and Herriot have reached, if any, as to the fate of the disarmament conference has got Geneva in a stew. They have been most discreet, but the French press hints that all they want is a truce in armaments and then a long and perhaps definite adjournment of the conference.

Arthur Henderson, MacDonald's old rival in the latter's old Labor cabinet, must have heard something of the kind, for in addressing the peace workers mobilized here he said today:

"There is no longer any one who believes that mere limitation of arms at existing levels is a tolerable result. A reduction, drastic and universal, is what the opinion of the world most imperiously demands."

Some interpret this statement as a desperate attempt by Henderson to save the conference from what is considered to be a Franco-British agreement that the situation is hopeless.

The American delegation, whose appropriation granted by congress for this mission is not getting fatter in the most expensive town in Europe, is not sympathetic to any plan to kill off the conference, or to even "wrap it in cotton" during the Lausanne meeting.

It is felt by the American delegates that an armaments holiday would not meet the approval of the American people, in view of the fact that the American navy is still not built up to treaty levels.

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, June 13.—Although officially not one word has been said here regarding the Saar basin in connection with the Lausanne reparations conference, this former German territory now held by France is the subject of much discussion in the press, leading to the conclusion that it will be the basis of Premier Herriot's strategy at the Lausanne meeting. It is believed that in return for an extended moratorium on German payments, France will propose that instead of holding the scheduled plebiscite on return of the Saar to Germany in 1935, the French control of the region be extended.

Unidentified Man Falls from Aquitania; Lost

Mr. J. A. Van Buren,
Advertising Manager,
Cleveland Plain Dealer,
Cleveland, Ohio.

Dear Mr. Van Buren:-

We are perhaps better qualified than many companies to testify to the over-the-counter results produced by Plain Dealer advertising -- for we have used it consistently for over 35 years.

Year by year we have increased our space in the Plain Dealer. Last year was particularly "a Plain Dealer year," for we used more advertising in the Plain Dealer than in any of the other Cleveland papers.

The people to whom we sell are, unquestionably, the people who read the Plain Dealer -- the able-to-buy families who appreciate the better things.

Our company and the Plain Dealer have grown steadily, together. We hope that they may continue to do so.

Very truly yours,
THE CHANDLER & RUDD COMPANY.

● Don't choose newspapers solely on the basis of "morning" or "evening"! Don't give this factor even secondary consideration. It's distinctly misleading!

To make the right choice, consider this one fundamental fact: The number of able-to-buy families whose purchasing power is influenced by the newspapers under consideration.

In Cleveland, particularly, must newspapers be judged on this basis. And in Cleveland you'll discover it's the morning paper that is home-delivered and home-read!

It's the Cleveland Plain Dealer!

That's why The Chandler & Rudd Co. uses the Plain Dealer most! That's why all other outstanding Cleveland food merchants... companies which must get immediate results from their advertising.. invest consistently in Plain Dealer advertising space.

And that's why you should put the Plain Dealer first on your list! Get all the facts.... write, wire or 'phone today.

Amusing Novel by Miss Coyle Lacks Depth

"The French Husband" Is Gay and Light.

By Fanny Butcher.

KATHLEEN COYLE.

ANY ONE expecting the usual keen, vivid analysis of subtle emotion that has been characteristic of Kathleen Coyle's fiction to date is hereby warned off "The French Husband." Readers of "A Flock of Birds" who found the staunch mother of an Irish patriot about to be executed a character which time will never efface from their memories, and the eager chrysalis Liv the core of a book of memorable beauty will look in vain for Miss Coyle's intense human understanding as well as her crisp and vivid style of writing in her latest opus.

Her publishers recognized that fact apparently, for they confide on the dust jacket: "So entirely different from Kathleen Coyle's other books that we at first contemplated publishing her book as the work of an anonymous author."

As the work of an anonymous author "The French Husband" would have been an amusing, light, gay, at times almost farcical, tale destined for an afternoon in whatever has taken the place of the old-fashioned "hammock." It has every one of the earmarks of the popular "hammock novel" carefully brought up to date by the fact that it is mildly shocking.

Finds Husband Loves Mistress.

The heroine—the wife of one of the French husbands in the book—is an American heiress who came to believe on her wedding day that her attractive comte had married her only for her money and was still devoted to his mistress. (The other French husband is his cousin, and he and his American wife have a supremely successful marriage, with three superb children and a perfect understanding.) With such a beginning their marriage had gone very badly for three years. Then the mistress got herself a rich husband, and the young wife, at the advice of the clever and knowledgeful Princess (a sort of unofficial head of the family), went off on a trip to Jugo-Slavia with her husband. They were, for the first time in their marriage, really happy with one another when word came that she must return immediately to America to the deathbed of her father.

From the moment of her father's death things began to happen . . . and for most of the rest of the book the old Princesse takes the spotlight. It is she who manages everything, including reporters whose quarry is not herself but the wife of the young French comte who was shot by a woman as he was boarding a train for Paris from Split, Jugoslavia. The situations become at times too farcical and not enough farce. They are too farcical for any illusion of reality and yet they are not made pure farce, which they might so easily have been made. Miss Coyle just misses sounding exactly the right note of fripperiness.

Entertaining, Not Brilliant.

"The French Husband" is entertaining, there is no denying that, but it is in no sense brilliant criticism of national cultures about which it is perfectly possible with real genius to be extremely profound with the most delicate and the lightest touch.

Miss Coyle does not give the reader a picture of a typical French husband, or even a caricature of one. Lucien's penchant for pretty women is no more French than it is Turkish. And his initial resentment of the screaming headlines' declaration that "American Millions Purchase Another Title" on his wedding day had a good deal to do with the wrong start, especially as the title was in no dire need of an infusion of gold (a fact which the American wife learned long after she had accepted it as gospel).

The old Princesse is French enough (though her national idiosyncrasies are not intensely delineated by the author), but if the reader hopes to discover an answer in its pages to the question propounded on the dust jacket, "Do continental husbands make the best lovers?" he will have to explore other literary charts than Miss Coyle's.

"The French Husband" is fluff, pure, and simple . . . well, at least pure enough to please and simple enough to satisfy the modern reader. And fluff is perfectly suited to a summer's breeze.

Cardinal Sees Modern Era Facing Decay

Warns of Moral Cancer in School Address.

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

Modern civilization is facing the same fate which overtook Greece and Rome when their golden ages crumbled because of moral decay, Cardinal Mundelein told a class of twenty-four young women at the first commencement of Mundelein college, Sheridan road at Lake Michigan, yesterday.

The causes which imperil society today are the same which ate away the strength of ancient Greece, and in this moral cancer which blighted the national life "women played the main part," Cardinal Mundelein said.

"We face the same conditions today—divorce so frequent throughout the land that one out of every six marriages ends in divorce," he said. "No day's news is complete without the tidings of the divorce or remarriage of at least one moving picture actress. What is worse, this shameless system of publicity is placed before our growing boys and girls so that early in life they became cognizant of this morality of the barnyard.

"A generation ago, before an audience like this, we would not have mentioned the word 'birth control,'" Cardinal Mundelein continued. "Today a lot of pagan women, like their predecessors of ancient Rome, restless, neurotic busybodies, are clamoring before the legislatures of the land for the right to desolate the population of this nation.

"They would undermine in every possible way our national defense, they would stop the procession of little souls that come from the creative hand of God.

"In the last ten years the population of our city has increased, while the number of children in the primary grades is 10 per cent less today than it was ten years ago. In the last dozen years the annual birth rate of our city has shrunk from 26 in every thousand to 12½ in every thousand of population. It needs no Daniel today to read the handwriting on the wall."

Miss Helen O'Gara gave the official greeting to Cardinal Mundelein, who is chancellor of the college. The Rev. Robert M. Kelley, president of Loyola university, presented the candidates for the degrees.

Miss O'Gara and Eleanor E. Joyce were given the bachelor of arts degree cum laude; Elaine L. Krambles, bachelor of science cum laude, and Helen Demetry, bachelor of science in commerce cum laude.

An expert in social welfare told Northwestern university's graduating class of 1,547 students that, despite the work of endowed social research and social agencies in late years, quite a few problems remained to be mastered by science — unemployment, crime, cost of government, and so on.

"We are still far from an adequate science of human relations," Shelby M. Harrison, general director of the Russell Sage foundation, said in his commencement address at the morning exercises in Patten gymnasium.

Mr. Harrison made a plea for "a scientific or research attitude toward current issues and their remedies, a spirit of social inventiveness and the cultivation of the ability to take the long view of things and events and to pursue a steady purposeful course."

Honorary degrees were received by six men: the speaker, Harrison, doctor of laws; Louis Eckstein, master of fine

White Is Rule of Fashionables in Accessories

Hats, Handbags, Jewelry Are That Color.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

IF you don't believe that white accessories have taken the town by storm, try shopping for some other color and notice the slim collections of new colored ideas as compared to the seemingly unlimited supply of eye filling fashionable new things of clear white, blue white, off white, creamy white, and practically any tinted white you may need! And the prices are low.

White hats are headliners that fairly scream for attention . . . small gob affairs tilt engagingly over sun tanned feminine brows . . . . brief brimmed sailors of mesh materials are wired around the outer edge to maintain a rigid straightness that is so effective with tailored clothes.

Floppy white panamas top smart daytime costumes with white or contrasting colored bands that are interchangeable . . . white linen hats stitched for stiffness around the brims go out with printed muslins, sheer cottons, and obligingly accompany gayly patterned chiffons to garden parties and other afternoon adventures.

And white pique hats are so new that they completely surprise you when you see them out of nights, white caps that fit as snugly and saucily as skull caps. They are perfect with the new pique dance dresses, particularly when they have sheer flattering brims of black net for mysterious contrast.

White handbags are something to really get excited about. Bagmakers have used every kind of white material that they could think of to fashion these new summer models that are so mercifully low priced and so plentiful.

White perforated felt is the newest arrival . . . felt with all sizes of neat little holes to openly match the perforated white footwear . . . most of these creations refuse to consider anything in the way of extra effects of other fabrics or compositions such as frames, clasps, or decorations. The models are always extremely simple in design and shape.

Knitted swatches of material are fashioned into bags to match the successful white knitted sports costumes that are just as smart for daytime wear as they are for either active or spectator sports events. However, these white bags go in for color contrast with frames of bright colors, such as lipstick red, cobalt blue, orange and green, or you may buy the all white creations of coarse good looking nubby bumpy knit fabrics with white frames and clasps.

White lizard handbags, of course, were primarily mated to the white lizard summer shoes, but now this lizard duet has been supplemented by neat prim little cigaret lighters and cases of pressed white lizard leather, and smart little vanity cases treated to the same white coat can be added to your ensembles.

White pigskin bags are paired with pigskin slip-on gloves of white . . . belts of this same sturdy stuff are also available . . . and as long as summer stays you will be sure of finding some of the most successful patent leather accessories in white. Belts, bags, hatbands and buttonhole flowers of this sleek shiny stuff seemingly will shine forever in the fashion scheme of things.

White and tones of ivory enter the picture in costume jewelry . . . in necklaces of chalk white beads . . . in quaint chokers made with ivory balls suspended in gold or silver hoops, and there are bracelets to match.

High luster is yours, if your costume needs it, in lovely white elephant ivory, that has returned to fashionable favor with price tags that are unbelievably low for this authentic stuff . . . you can buy the long, slender necklace, shorter chokers, ball or button earrings at prices that will positively stun you.

Pick Stenographer to Play Star Part in Film She Typed

Hollywood, Cal., June 13.—(AP)—Two weeks ago Dorothy Wilson, a stenographer at the Radio studio, was assigned to type the script for a motion picture.

Today she was playing the feminine lead in that picture and another of those "Cinderella" stories of Hollywood has come true.

For two years Miss Wilson, vivacious, brown haired and blue eyed, had been seen daily by directors, casting agents and cameramen. But if none of the directors ever thought of suggesting a screen test to Dorothy, she herself had less interest in acting.

When she delivered the finished manuscript to the executive who was selecting players for it, he had a sudden hunch to try her in one of the rôles. Dorothy wasn't greatly thrilled. The test resulted in not only a contract for Miss Wilson but the lead in "Fraternity House," film of the manuscript she worked on.

Praises Model Rooms Created by Mrs. Thorne

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

The most delightful and exquisite of exhibits is that of ten miniature period rooms designed and arranged by Mrs. James Ward Thorne, which opened yesterday in the Ackermann galleries, 408 South Michigan avenue. It is almost safe to say that nothing so charming has been seen in town before. They are like little peep-shows, dwarf setting for romance, each of these perfect and gemlike exponents of interiors different in time, nationality, and kind.

One starts with a Venetian room, the bust, chandeliers, and bronze tables of which gave Mrs. Thorne her first idea in the craft she has adopted. Note the wax miniature over the chest, the tiny pearls that give it luster are real. Then go back to the entrance and rejoice in the authenticity of the Victorian room, marvelously true to type in its harsh, contrasting colors of drapes and carpet (colors which still manage to retain elements of the picturesque) and its myriad bibelots and heavy gilt frames, also heed the motto "God Bless Our Home," a Victorian touch indispensable to true Victorians.

Remark how such vivid coloring as this room possesses stands the English climate in good stead and how a further room, one of Italian parentage, suits the Italian sun by being dark, shadowed, and cool. Farther along a Spanish hall repeats the cool weight of the Italian dignified proportions. To lighten it a fountain runs brightly in a gay little court, and through a mechanical device really runs. Another Spanish interior, a bedroom, is heavily ecclesiastical. A divergence in kind gives us a delightful kitchen interior from the island of Mallorca.

A Louis XVI. bedroom, one of the most charming of all the interiors, is hung with chandeliers made from beads Mrs. Thorne found in Paris, in parenthesis return to the ecclesiastical Spanish bedroom and remark the bed, fashioned from a Spanish comb. The proportions and development of the Louis XVI. bedroom are irresistible. Each detail is exquisite. Little books and tiny figures, the wallpaper, everything is entrancing.

A "Temple of Love" created from a tiny house first made to keep a kitten, and found by Mrs. Thorne abroad, is another delightful episode. Concluding the exhibit is the second most beautiful room of them all, a modern reception hall done in black and white, with the stairs a decorative feature and not merely a means by which to go from one story to another. The touch of red in the few rare pieces of ornament are thrilling. This interior shows modern interior decoration at its best, a magnificent achievement in cool, pure lines coupled with a ruthless severity of detail.

The exhibition will continue to July 9. There is a small admission fee, which goes to the Architects' Relief fund.

Father's Love Is the Theme of 'Race Track'

"RACE TRACK."

Directed by James Cruze.
Presented at the Palace theater.

THE CAST.

Joe ..... Leo Carrillo
Jackie ..... Junior Coghlan
Myra ..... Kay Hammond
"Horseface" ..... Lee Moran
Attorney ..... Huntley Gordon
Mr. Ryan ..... Wilfrid Lucas
Judge ..... Joseph Girard

By Mae Tinée.

Good Morning!

The ladies, God bless 'em, have no corner on this "If-I-were-hanged-on-the-highest-hill-I-know-whose-love would-follow-me-still" stuff. No sir. Daddies got hearts too and will go to the most amazing lengths of self-sacrifice to insure the welfare of their young!

Wallace Beery demonstrated this fact in "The Champ" when he smacked down the little feller he loved better than his life. Leo Carrillo gives added proof in "Race Track."

"The Champ" and "Race Track" have decidedly similar stories. In the former the boy is own son to the man. In the latter an adopted lad is the apple of a hard-boiled hombre's eye. In both cases the paters commit a supreme act of devotion that is, on its face, something apparently entirely different, and which speeds son from father to a better life than father could provide.

This is an interesting and well acted picture. Leo Carrillo, with his winsome smile, lovable eccentricities and pig English, does a corking good job as the bookie who stops short—for cause—in rearing his boy to be a jockey. Kay Hammond as the lad's sad, repentant mother is unusually appealing. She has a nice gift of reticence. Junior Coghlan is believable as the youngster in the case and Lee Moran qualifies as Joe the bookie's man Friday.

The race track sequences are thrilling and there's—rather a bit too much—"different" photography. Direction was clever and sympathetic, dialogue rings true and the film holds considerable suspense and surprise.

I think you'll like "Race Track," and will also enjoy the stage bill, which features Irene Bordoni, Queenie Smith, and Harry Puck and Hobart Bosworth.

See you tomorrow.

G.O.P. Leaders Find Time for Some Parties

Social Affairs Are Put in Second Place.

BY JUDITH CASS.

THE social side of a national convention is of such minor importance compared with the big issues involved that every one connected with the business of the convention begs off giving out much information about the strictly social affairs (as if any affair this week in Chicago could be strictly social) planned for the Republicans.

There really are only a few parties planned, however, for most of the social gatherings will be impromptu ones. All engagements that are made by those here for serious business are made with cancellation clauses, for no one knows when something urgent will come up that will prevent the keeping of a mere social engagement.

The largest private party is the dinner that the Howard Linns are giving at the Casino tomorrow night for the Henry J. Whighams and Miss Sibyl Whigham of New York, who are the Linns' guests at the residence of Mrs. Linn's father, Edward T. Blair of 1516 Lake Shore drive. The Linns are giving another dinner on Wednesday, the 20th, presumably for some of the Democrats who will be in session here then.

Strawns Hosts at Merry Party.

I'm sure no gayer or more enjoyable party will be given during the week than the supper party Mr. and Mrs. Silas H. Strawn gave Sunday night at their residence, 209 Lake Shore drive, for Dr. and Mrs. Nicholas Murray Butler and Miss Sarah Butler of New York.

The lie detector which has entertained and mystified the guests at so many smart parties this winter was put to use Sunday night and I'm told that some of the lies detected were most amusing—for instance, when some of the feminine guests varied a little from the exact truth in stating their ages.

Last night the Strawns, who are a nice old fashioned couple in that they always prefer to entertain at home, gave a dinner for Secretary of War and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, and Friday night the Strawns will entertain for Ambassador and Mrs. Walter E. Edge of Paris.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker gave a small luncheon Sunday at the Saddle and Cycle for Mrs. Alvin T. Hert of Louisville, a vice chairman of the Republican national committee, who herself is entertaining informally quite a bit this week and who is to be hostess at a tea this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the ballroom of the Congress for the national committeewomen, the state vice chairmen, the presidents of Republican woman's clubs, and the women delegates and alternates. Mrs. Gann and Mrs. Frank Mann are to speak at the tea.

Other Parties For Visitors.

Among last night's parties were a dinner that the Tiffany Blakes gave at the Casino for Mr. and Mrs. Albert G. Simms (Ruth Hanna McCormick) and one that the Walter B. Wolfs gave at their residence, 209 Lake Shore drive, for their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Eliot Cross and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Gardner, all of Westbury, Long Island. The Linns and their guests, the Whighams, Mr. and Mrs. Reeve Schley and Miss Eleanor Schley of New York and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Spencer Morris of New York were among the Wolfs' 20 guests.

Mrs. Waller Borden and Mrs. Jacob Baur, two of our leading feminine Republicans, are not planning to entertain this week because they both are too busy with political affairs, but they were moving spirits in the plans for the huge dinner the Women's National Republican club is giving tonight for Secretary of War and Mrs. Hurley at the Stevens.

Dry Law Foes Are Very Busy.

Every one will be there tonight, judging by the list of reservations, except perhaps Mrs. Leslie Wheeler and Mrs. William H. Mitchell, co-chairmen of the Illinois group of the Woman's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, for although they both have reservations they told me yesterday they are so busy converting delegates and alternates to their way of thinking about the 18th amendment that they are giving up everything this week except to stay right at their headquarters in the Blackstone hotel and work.

Working with them is a large group of prominent women from all over the country, including Mrs. Courtlandt Nicoll, Mrs. Archibald Roosevelt, and Mrs. Edward Moore of New York, Mrs. Frederick M. Alger and Mrs. Charles A. Dean Jr., of Detroit, Mrs. Graham Dougherty of Philadelphia, Mrs. Mae L. Hamilton of Nevada, Mrs. Kent S. Clow, Mrs. Stanley Field, Mrs. Charles G. King, Mrs. Clifford Rodman, Mrs. George Nicholas Jr. and Mrs. Harold Stretz, all of Chicago.

This band of workers will be as busy during the Democratic convention as they are now, although they all will return to their homes to rest in between the two, unless something should happen to keep the Republicans here longer than this week.

The Charles G. Cushings will come out from Long Island to be the Wheelers' guests in Lake Forest for the Democratic convention.

Mrs. James H. Douglas Jr. arrived today from Washington, where her husband is assistant secretary of the treasury, and will be with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. McGann, in Lake Forest, during the convention, while the Douglas apartment at 1500 Lake Shore drive is occupied by Mr. Douglas' chief, Ogden L. Mills and Mrs. Mills. I saw Mrs. Mills lunching yesterday at the Blackstone with Mrs. Nicholas Longworth and both drew all eyes, so smart did they look, and so busy were they being greeted by friends.

Miss Katrina McCormick, who has been attending Columbia university in New York, will arrive in the city Thursday to join her mother, Mrs. Al-

A STRAIN ON THE FAMILY TIE

Sudden Love

By

ELISABETH SANXAY HOLDING

SYNOPSIS.

Esmee Sully spends her forlorn young life between the office, where she is an inefficient typist, and a dismal home. The widowed Mrs. Sully loves her children blindly, but doesn't know how to direct their spiritual or physical needs. Lew, a year older than Esmee, is mingling in bad company. Cynthia, the oldest, has been deserted by her husband. Jimmy Consadine, a crook lawyer, forces Lew, whom he has in his power, to introduce his sister. Esmee, starved for beauty and change, is fascinated by Jimmy's grand manner, but finds him an unmanageable lover. Then she meets Michael Marriott, a dissipated young playwright. It's love at first sight. She feels his need of her is real. Returning home one evening, Esmee finds Michael waiting for her. He'd been drinking heavily. Esmee takes him home in a cab, but he has no key and can't get in. In desperation she takes him to a hotel and registers as his wife. Claire Cowley, Michael's sister, tells Esmee that Michael is engaged. But when Michael calls Esmee goes to see him. He tells her his engagement is broken; that he can't live without her, and wants to marry her. Esmee tries unsuccessfully to break with Jimmy. He accuses her of double-crossing him and threatens to have Lew sent to jail. Esmee drives out to the country with him on Sunday. He forces her to accompany him to a roadhouse where his word is law. Michael, who has trailed Jimmy's car, breaks in and rescues her. Jimmy swears he'll have Michael killed. Michael and Esmee stop at an inn for dinner. Esmee determines to have one last happy evening with Michael and then go to Jimmy. Michael wants to take Esmee to spend the night at Claire's.

INSTALLMENT XXVI.

A SECRET UNSHARED.

Esmee thought of driving with Michael, along a lonely road, and always looking behind. And at last seeing another car, coming inexorably after them . . .

"What is it, my little heart's darling? Tired of driving?"

"I . . . Yes . . . I think I am—a little . . . And Michael, I'd forgotten . . . I'd really better not go to Claire's—because I've got to go to the office so early—"

"You haven't. You've never got to go back there."

"I must, Michael! I—really I must!"

"No," he said. "You're going to marry me. I've got some money, Esmee, and I'm going to make a damn sight more. You've only got to be lovely and lazy and never tired, and never worried. I'd—I can help a bit with your people, Esmee. I don't mean to sound like one of these benign sugar daddies. 'You'll be all right, little girl.' You know that sort of thing. . . . But I guess I can get your brother a job——"

Lew in a cell, with his young head in his hands. . . . How could she have forgotten him, even for an hour, and been happy?

"And I liked your mother," he went on. "She'd die as a sacrifice to the gods, still with that smile."

"If Lew goes to prison maybe she will die," thought Esmee.

"I've got to go to the office—just tomorrow morning, Michael. I mean—to tell them I'm leaving. To settle up some things."

"Esmee, one of the really superb things in life is to leave a job flat. With the appropriate classic gesture of fingers to the nose. I know. I've done it. I had a job. An uncle got it for me. I said I wanted to write plays, and my relatives said, 'certainly, my boy . . . But see something of reality first . . .' and so on. Humoring the poor fool, you know. I'd been a blasted young tramp, and I'd seen things, and felt things. But none of that was 'reality.' Reality was sitting at a desk in an office. Like an oyster in a shell. I wrote that first play at night. And, of course, I was no good all day. Sleepy and bored—bored—my God! The day I sold that play, I went out to lunch and very simply didn't go back. The next afternoon they rang me up to know if I were ill. Very pleasant young woman secretary enquiring. I was pleasant, but I said, 'O, no thanks. Not ill. But I'm a little tight.' She kindly advised me to plead sudden illness, and sleep it off, and show up the next morning. And I said—I couldn't tell you the ecstasy of saying it—I said, 'Thank you very much, Miss Whoozis, but I'm not coming back. You know, the whole thing's so infernally tedious.' Of course, if she had been a man, I could have done better. There were some beautiful Anglo-Saxon things I wanted to say . . . Try it, Esmee! Just don't go. Then they'll ring you up, and you can say you haven't time to attend to them any more."

"Michael, dear, I've got to go tomorrow morning," she said.

She was afraid that she was betraying herself by her voice, by her look. But she could do no better. She had to go in the hope that Jimmy would telephone to her, that she could see him, and bargain with him, offer him the rest of her life, if he would spare Michael, and Lew.

And that would mean this was the end. She would never, never see Michael again.

"I'll die," she thought. "I know God will let me die soon, if I have to do that. When I've made it safe for Michael, and Lew's home again."

She glanced at Michael and saw that she was right. She had betrayed herself. He knew there was something more horribly amiss. He sat silent, his hand still in hers, and there was a look on his face she had never seen before, a dreadful look.

"Esmee," he said, presently. "I'm afraid I've gone about as far as I can. I mean—I've tried to shut up—not to ask you questions. I kept telling myself that your life was your own. But, my God, it's not! Your life's mine, now. I can't—not know any longer."

Their eyes met.

"I can't tell you, Michael," she said. But in her soft little voice there was a finality that silenced him for a time.

"It's not jealousy," he said, presently. "I think you know that. It's only that I can see there's something tormenting you, and . . . Do you mean that you never want to tell me, Esmee? All our life together?"

She thought for a time.

"I'll give a letter to Cynthia," she thought, "to give to Michael—if I die. Then he'll know . . . And if I marry Jimmy—if I have to leave Michael—I know I'll die soon . . ."

Then a wild and desperate mutiny rose in her heart.

"No! Michael loves me the way I love him. He'll suffer—so horribly, if I leave him. He'd rather die than for me to go to Jimmy. It would be better for him to be shot—for us both to die . . ."

She turned away her head, and looked out of the window.

"It can't be true!" she cried in her young heart. "I'm being—just morbid . . . I won't believe . . . . I'll marry Michael, and we'll be happy. Jimmy would't care—"

With her own eyes she had seen Jimmy try to kill Michael. And he had meant what he said. She had to believe it.

And she knew too that Michael's life was more precious to her than anything else on earth. Even if he had to suffer, even if he were heartsick, suffering, she wanted him to live, to be in this world. . . . Let him live without her—but let him live.

"Esmee!" he said sharply. "Do you mean you're never going to tell me?"

She shook her head so that her hair stirred about her face, and the light of the hanging lamp striking it, made threads of bright gold stand out.

"No, Michael . . . I'll explain—later . . . Michael, O, Michael, please know I'd like to tell you now, only . . . Michael, please try to understand . . ."

That was an entreaty which Michael had not yet in his life ignored. He had always tried to understand every one and everything, and there was very little in life that was beyond his pity, his tolerance, his queer, half-unconscious sympathy. He tried now to understand, and, in a measure, he did, only that his love for the girl weakened his tolerance, caused to rise in him a hot possessive passion he wished to deny. He wanted to be only tender to her, and there was something in his heart that was not tender, but fierce, and masterful, and violent.

He struggled against it.

"All right, Esmee," he said.

There was a curtness in his tone, but it was the best he could do. To atone, he bent over and kissed her. But she knew that this reservation, this secret, was an offense against their love, and was injuring it.

"I'm awfully sorry—I've got to go to the office," she said and her voice had changed: it was anxious and cautious. "Do you mind seeing about trains now, Michael?"

"Certainly," he said, and asked the waiter for a timetable.

"Not so good," he told her. "You see, this isn't a commuting place. There's a train at eight-thirty, that would get us to New York about ten—"

A new fear seized her. Jimmy might ring up her home, and find her not there, and that anger of his she so dreaded would be greatly increased.

"The one before that's at six-twenty," he said. "That's pretty early." His tone hurt her.

"I think I'd better go home tonight, Michael," she said. "I really ought to. I want to get clean clothes, and . . . I'd better."

"I want to do whatever suits you," he said. "But I won't let you go home, Esmee. That's final. That fellow will be worrying you . . . If you've got to get to your job, all right. You'll have to come to Claire's."

The thought dismayed her.

"Claire can lend you anything you want."

"I don't want to go to Claire's, and borrow things from her. And what would she think, Michael, if we arrived there together?"

Lita Chaplin to Place Two Sons in Films

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., June 13.—[Special.]—Lita Grey Chaplin is back in Hollywood, but still playing personal appearances in the theater. She confided what a great idea she thought it would be to place her two children, Charlie Chaplin Jr. and Sidney Earle, in child actor rôles.

If this happens to be really Lita's intention, and not merely a statement for press agent purposes, it is expected to bring a roar from Charlie Chaplin Sr. when he arrives here on the last lap of his world girdling tour from Japan, within a week or two.

The boys in New York who have been saying that Jimmy Cagney has buried his hatchet with the Warner Bros. are all wet.

According to the lad who led the box office parade into the Warner counting room until he walked out entirely on his $1,400 a week contract two months ago, "I haven't had a whisper toward getting together with the Warners, and I have not been near or talked with any representative of theirs."

Jimmy sets out for the east by automobile in a day or two, and will keep in touch daily with his brother, Dr. Harry Cagney in Jackson Heights, N. Y., the object of the close touch not being to angle for a settlement with the film producers but to follow the condition of his mother, who is ill in the east.

Charley Ray is due here in a week or two with dickers for a movie comeback.

Trig Little Book Tells All About Ships

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

Have you a son or daughter who loves the sea and the ships that sail on them? And have you found yourself singing a little chorus of "I don't know," when asked anything more intricate than the difference between a square rigged ship and a schooner, a yacht, and a launch? Or if you love boats and ships yourself, haven't you often wished you could learn with your children the names and special characters of the various vessels, large and small, that you see on river and bay and lake and ocean?

I have, I know, so I was especially pleased the other day when a snug little literary craft sailed into my ken from the hands of its makers. It came into a welcoming port, for I liked it so much that I want to pass information about it on to you, especially as summer and seashore and water trips are in the offing.

First, the book describes boats we commonly see, liners, tramp steamers, motorboats, etc. And it tells about lighthouses, lightships, and the traffic regulations at sea.

Next, for those who like old vessels there are stories of the Venetians and other early sea traders and historic ships like the Half Moon and Clermont.

And, last, for those who love to use their hands there are directions for making miniature boats.

"The Ship Book" is published by Houghton Mifflin and sells for only $1.50. The authors, Dukelow and Webster, have done a shipshape job, and I know of no other book that answers the same purpose as this trig little volume.

G.O.P. Leaders Find Time for Some Parties

Social Affairs Are Put in Second Place.

Among other well known women here for the convention who are busy seeing their Chicago friends in between their political activities are Mrs. James W. Good, wife of the late secretary of war; Mrs. William P. MacCracken Jr., wife of the former assistant secretary of commerce for aviation; and Mrs. Thad Brown, wife of the federal radio commission chief.

Golden Wedding of F. G. Logans.

If publishers and presses could be hurried a bit, Mrs. Frank G. Logan would have the pleasure of presenting autographed copies of her own book of poems to all of her children and grandchildren, who will gather here tomorrow for the Logans' fiftieth wedding anniversary. The book, which Mrs. Logan has called "Lights and Shadows," will be off the presses in the late summer. A book dealer who has seen an advance dummy tells us the poems are lovely and predicts a large sale for the volume.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Terbell [Phoebe Logan], Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Moore Jr. [Rhea Munroe], and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lloyd [Josephine Munroe] may not arrive in Chicago in time for the golden wedding celebration of the young women's grandparents because they are all to attend the wedding today in New York of Thomas G. Terbell and Miss Louise Boone.

The wedding is to be held at All Angels' church and Phoebe Logan Terbell will be matron of honor and her husband will be best man for his brother. The bridal party will include eight eastern debutantes as bridesmaids, and an equal number of ushers. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Oliver Boone of New York.

The wedding of Mrs. Mildred Marshall Blair to Jonathan Hayward of New York is to be solemnized tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock in the Community church in New York. The Rev. F. R. Call will officiate. Only relatives will be present.

News from Lake Geneva.

From Lake Geneva comes news of the Chicago colony there for the summer: The Kellogg Fairbanks had their niece, Mrs. Frederick Hauck; Mr. Hauck, the Graham Aldises, Shepard Vogelsang, Arthur Meeker Jr., and Rollin Larrabee among their guests over the week-end.

Mrs. Fairbank, by the way, is one of our leading Democratic women, and she came back to town from the lake last night to be here during the Republican convention festivities, perhaps as she told a Republican leader one day, "to get pointers on how to run the women's end of the Democratic convention."

To return to Lake Geneva: Our correspondent there writes that Fred Wacker had a grand time during the week-end trying out his new A boat Sweepotakes. Last season Mr. Wacker's boat had a revolving mast which was a sailing curiosity but not a great success.

The yacht club competition at Lake Geneva officially starts this coming Saturday with tuning up races and the following Saturday initiates the races for points toward the end of the season cups. Ralph N. Isham, vice commodore of the club, flies up every week-end and causes great excitement by circling over his house, blowing the aeroplane siren, to signal the chauffeur to meet him at the landing field.

Janet O'Leary to Be Bride.

Miss Janet O'Leary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John William O'Leary of Lake Forest, and Rufus Choate Brown III, of Oshkosh, Wis., will be married at 8:30 o'clock this evening at the First Presbyterian church in Lake Forest, with the Rev. George Roberts officiating. A small reception will be held after the ceremony at "Robinwood," the O'Leary residence.

The wedding attendants will include Miss Dawn Beatty, maid of honor. Miss Virginia Melody, Miss Greta Luckow, Miss Margaret Ellen Downes of Oshkosh, and Mrs. Charles V. Frings of Pekin, Ill., the bridesmaids. Henry Brown of Oshkosh will be best man for his brother and the ushers will include William Brown, George Cameron of Appleton, Wis.; Wheeler Nazro of Houston, Tex.; Thomas Standish of Sewickley, Pa.; Arden Yinkey of Grosse Point, Mich., and Dr. William Clark of Cleveland.

Members of the bridal party were week-end guests of the O'Learys at "Robinwood." The bridal dinner was given last night by Mr. and Mrs. O'Leary.

Arthur Bissell is interesting all of his friends in a benefit dance carnival to be held on Friday evening in Diana court. He's arranged a fine program, and the circular court, with its splashing fountain and classic marble pillars, should make a fine setting for the dancers. The performers will be Hertzel Amdur, who is known as an "American tango dancer"; Jose Castro, who does the Mexican variety of the tango; Mlle. Alta Warsawska, a Spanish dancer, and Mlle. Zenia Zarena and Mme. Krasnopolsky, who perform after the fashion of the Russian ballet artists.

This week's program of the June festival at Diana court also includes a fashion show to be given under the auspices of the Northwestern University Settlement board on Wednesday afternoon, and a tea being planned by the Vassar House association for Friday afternoon.

French Evening Wraps Fashioned in Three Lengths

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS. — [Special.] — Little wraps are universally worn for evening in Paris. One seldom sees any wrap longer than hip length after dark. There is no one supremely smart, fixed length above the hip line. Your wrap may be anywhere from bust length to hip. Most of the jackets and capes one sees in Paris are in one of three lengths—bust length, waist length and hip length.

Three wraps of the smartest French types are shown in today's sketch. At the top is a hip length jacket of black chiffon velvet seen recently at the Ambassadeurs. This wrap is smart because of its big sleeves that end above the wrists in small white satin cuffs, and because of its loose, draped neckline, also in white satin. A single strass button holds the jacket closed and keeps the becoming drapery of the neckline in place.

In the center is shown a summer evening cape from Augustabernard. It is made of pale pink crêpe satin and has a hem of silver fox fur. The front of this cape is just bust length. It is draped upward and crossed to fasten in diamond buttons on the two shoulders. The back of this cape is circular and droops almost to the waistline.

At the bottom is Louiseboulanger's big sleeved evening bolero of gold colored faille-taffeta that is worn by some ultra chic Parisiennes. The sleeves may be pushed up as shown or worn full length.

Preview Tea For Model Rooms.

In spite of the many things which seemed to keep every one rushing madly yesterday about 200 well known persons found time to drop in at the Ackermann galleries on South Michigan avenue for the preview of Mrs. James Ward Thorne's miniature period rooms and the tea that Mrs. Thorne and Mrs. Edward H. Bennett gave from 4 to 6 o'clock.

No art exhibition within the memory of this reporter ever was more enthusiastically received. Some of the admiring throng that attended the preview and tea were Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Hall McCormick, Harold F. McCormick, Mrs. Joseph M. Patterson, Mrs. Howard Linn, Mrs. Francis R. Dickinson, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker, Mrs. Ambrose C. Cramer, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Mitchell, Mrs. Gustave I. Tolson, Mrs. Augustus K. Maxwell, Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Homer C. Chapin, Mr. and Mrs. Henry K. Chapin, Mrs. Joseph Leiter, Thomas Leiter, Mrs. Charles H. Schweppe, and Mrs. Charles Garfield King.

John Stuart of Hubbard Woods has gone to Asheville, N. C., for the graduation today of his son, John Stuart Jr. Other boys from this vicinity who will be presented with diplomas at Asheville today are Barton Cameron, son of Dr. and Mrs. Dan U. Cameron; Curtis Akerly Spaulding, Frederick Lloyd Baker Jr. of Hinsdale, Ralph Edgar Ellis Jr. of Winnetka, and Donald Clifford Graves of Evanston.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dern II. of Winnetka are being congratulated on the birth of a son, John Dern III., on Saturday at the Presbyterian hospital. Before her marriage Mrs. Dern was Miss Jean MacLeish, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce MacLeish of Winnetka.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McKay of Overlea, Fairfield, Conn., announce the birth of a son, Gardner McKay, at the Doctors' hospital on June 10. Mrs. McKay is the former Catherine Gardner of Chicago.

Warns of Moral Cancer in School Address.

arts, for his Ravinia opera and concerts; Jens Christian Bay, librarian of the John Crerar library, master of science; William A. Dyche, business manager of the university, doctor of laws; Dr. Harvey Cushing, Boston, brain surgeon, doctor of science; Odell Shepard, professor of English, Trinity college, Hartford, Conn., doctor of literature.

Those who were graduated with highest distinction were Carl I. Hovland, 2214 North Lawler avenue, B. A.; Grace Laura Kropf, 2038 Estes avenue, B. A.; Isabella M. Webster, 6246 Wayne avenue, B. A.; Bernice G. Quateman, 2251 West North avenue, B. S.; Milton H. Wright, Lake Bluff, B. S.; Hunter P. Davis, Kansas City, B. S. in commerce, and Mildred E. Marsh, of Ottawa, B. A.

Prof. James W. Garner, head of the department of political science, University of Illinois, addressed the graduating class of De Paul university in the afternoon in the De Paul auditorium, Webster and Sheffield avenues.

The root causes of the depression in business, industry, and agriculture are largely international rather than national or local, Prof. Garner said.

"The removal of the causes therefore cannot be brought about by national effort of the different countries acting separately and in a haphazard method," he continued.

The Very Rev. Francis V. Corcoran, C. M., president of the university, presented diplomas to 397 students, including 160 graduates in liberal arts, 152 in law, 30 in commerce, nine in graduate studies, three in music, and 64 in nursing science.

Honors awarded in the afternoon commencement exercises, De Paul's 25th commencement since the institution was chartered as a university, were: The liberal arts medal for general excellence, to Melvin J. Schreier, 6606 Lincoln avenue; the Losty trophy for the commerce college senior representing his class best in activities, to Albert Jantorni, 7835 Phillips avenue.

Madeline Hafner of Glencoe, recently elected De Paul's most representative co-ed, received the Pi Gamma Mu key for excellence in the social sciences. Thomas White, 3111 Lexington street, was awarded the Delta Sigma Pi scholarship key. Marcella Allely, 7620 Paxton avenue, was given the Frances R. Jackson scholarship in the graduate school.

Sister Mary Ricardo Ganey, R. S. M., and Sister Mary Wilfred Larney, R. S. M., were the first nuns ever to be graduated from the De Paul school of commerce.

The Chicago public schools will graduate — during exercises tomorrow, Thursday, and Friday—34,414 pupils, the largest number ever to be graduated in one year. In 1931 the total numbered 31,071. A total of 305 will be graduated from the Chicago Normal college on Friday. Crane Junior college will graduate 284.

Pupils graduating from four year high school courses number 8,062, compared to 6,816 last year. Elementary school graduates have decreased 430 from last year's figures, totaling 14,170 this year. Supt. Bogan attributed the decrease in elementary school graduates to the declining birth rate of recent years.

Three hundred and ninety-two graduates of the New Trier Township High school will receive their diplomas Thursday morning in the high school auditorium.

Dr. Edgar J. Goodspeed, University of Chicago, widely known translator of the New Testament, delivered the address yesterday at the 78th annual commencement at Rockford college, Rockford.

Commencement exercises at the University of Chicago will be held today, beginning at 11 a. m.

U.S. Hope Rests on Individuals, Says Dr. Chase

Urbana, Ill., June 13.—[Special.]—Simplicity marked the sixty-first annual commencement exercises at the University of Illinois this morning when Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase, president, delivered the address and conferred degrees on 1,900 graduates. Four hundred graduates received degrees from the Chicago departments last Friday.

If ever a time offered a challenge to educated men and women, that time is now, declared Dr. Chase, pointing out that the real life of America has always been a struggle.

"The way up and out of this present situation is not primarily to be found in any sort of external machinery of government, or control, or law, that men may devise," said Dr. Chase. "Neither dictatorships nor communistic experiments, with their subordination of the individual to the state, are remedies for what besets us; nor can we win through if we abdicate to governments the thinking and the energy that characterizes us as individuals.

"In such situation as this it always has been, in America, and it always will be, individual effort and energy and intelligence that make possible the forward steps that count. We must have leadership, but leadership that calls on the individual to do his utmost for himself."

To the graduates Dr. Chase said: "May I suggest that the first thing you ought to do about it is to keep your heads? Uncertain and perplexing as the immediate future may be, this country is not scheduled for ruin. Finally, you owe to your state and your country the responsibility of realizing that if we are to maintain in this country the tradition of the worth and possibilities of the individual it will be because educated men and women like yourselves lead the way."

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 13.—Mrs. Hoover spent the day in Medford, Mass., where she is attending graduation exercises at Tufts college. She was awarded an honorary degree by Dr. John A. Couzens, president of the college. President Hoover received an honorary degree of doctor of science from Tufts college in 1920.

Mr. and Mrs. Hollister Sturges of Chicago, who have had an apartment at the Wardman Park hotel through the winter and spring, have gone to New York and are at the Madison for a few days before going to their summer home, Ridgely manor, at Stone Ridge, N. Y.

Miss Virginia Dawes, who has been at the Willard with the retiring director of the Reconstruction Finance corporation and Mrs. Charles G. Dawes, left today for Evanston, Ill., where Mrs. Dawes will join her in a few days.

Mrs. Peyton C. March, wife of the former chief of staff, United States army, left today for Chicago to attend the Republican convention and will remain through the Democratic convention.

Mrs. Elonzo Tyner started today for her Chicago home and will be there through this week. Miss Peggy Tyner is a member of a house party being entertained by Miss Mary Cullum at her home, River Ranch farm, near Lancaster, Pa.

Are Wives the Cause for the Straying Mate?

BY DORIS BLAKE.

Are wives always to blame when they lose their mates' love?

Mrs. X would like to hear some opinions on this subject. It seems Mrs. X has just finished reading an article that set her thinking. The writer maintains no wife loses a husband except through her own fault. The article hit Mrs. X pretty hard. Her husband at the moment is showing all the symptoms of a man growing weary of an old love.

She has searcheed every nook and cranny of their seventeen year marriage and cannot figure out wherein she has failed so wantonly as to drive the man into another woman's arms. Unlike other currently neglected wives, Mrs. X does not drag out the old argument about sacrificing her best years, or about being the perfect housekeeper, homemaker, child-raiser. She admits to faults frankly. But lordy, she says, hasn't he them, too? What two people can live together seventeen years and not discover faults in each other?

"Why," she asks, "is the wife condemned for dropping the angel's robe once in a while? Or, to get right down to rock bottom, would the perfect angel robe serve any better to hold? Isn't there something in the male nature—some male natures—that would break out regardless of the wonder wife a man might have?"

Wives cannot always be to blame, Mrs. X argues, unless you're willing to admit that men are all fair and honest characters in their dealings with their wives. The very assumption that the woman is always to blame gives the man a clean, fine character slate.

This punches a good sized hole in the argument right in the beginning, for some of them [the men] are pretty darned ornery, exacting, irritating, unappreciative beings, if you ask Mrs. X. Yet, no matter what sort of disposition, ornery or even, the man brings into marriage, it's the woman's fault if the house collapses! The man is always presented by his defenders as an easily manageable, tractable, patient, long-suffering son of Adam who only walks out on his wife after years of martyrdom. Isn't the theory ridiculous, Mrs. X asks.

You tell her, readers, what you think about it, won't you?

Now's Time to Can Rhubarb for Next Winter

Methods Given Here Are Quick and Reliable.

BY MARY MEADE.

Yesterday we found ourselves simply too enthusiastic about all the hunger tempting dishes that can come out of a plot of rosy rhubarb to stop with a mere account of the pies, puddings, and cakes made delectable by this month's most favored of all fruits. So, having suddenly run out of space, but with ideas still coming on apace, we promised you a sequel for today to deal with preserves, conserves, marmalades, and other put up jobs—all with rhubarb as the central attraction.

If we would have rhubarb sauces, puddings, and what not next December, and do not hanker to pay the exalted prices then demanded for forced products, now is the time to plot and can. And this we may do by the cold pack, the hot pack, or the cold water method.

For the cold pack, use stalks that are between one-half and three-fourths of an inch in diameter. Wash and cut into one inch lengths. Blanch for one minute, then place under running water for a minute. Pack into sterile jars, filling each with a thin sirup made in the proportion of three cups of sugar to two of water. Cover loosely with lids and process sixteen minutes in a boiling water bath. Remove from the bath and seal at once.

As we mentioned yesterday, rhubarb is extremely acid. Thus it is possible to can it by the cold water method. To do this, prepare the rhubarb as described above and pack in sterile jars. Fill to overflowing with cold water and seal tightly. This type of canning is used for rhubarb later to be sugared and made into pies.

The last method, the hot pack, is also extremely simple, and often gives the most satisfactory results. Actually we are merely canning boiling hot, sweetened rhubarb sauce in sterile jars, and sealing them at once. And since this is the time not only for canned but for fresh rhubarb sauce as well, let's give a thought to sauce making.

In preparing rhubarb stalks for cooking, peel only when and where toughness demands it, as the color frequently is found only in the peelings. Cook quickly in a very little water until just tender—and don't over cook. Nothing is more irksome then pasty, thick sauce when one has once known the delights of the clear sirupy perfection that truly honors the name of rhubarb.

Sugar? Most epicures say one cup for every two of finely cut raw fruit. Add just before the sauce is done, boil for a minute and remove from the stove. You'll find this gives a better flavor than is obtained by sweetening when cold.

But if you're dealing with the less tender stalks late in the season, peel them, cover with boiling water, and let stand till cold. Pour this off, and simmer the rhubarb until tender, this time with the sugar added at the beginning of the process.

But even if you've sworn to put away a dozen or more cans of rhubarb, the family is bound to demand some without waiting. Besides serving the sauce "as it," try it some day as a surprise dessert to dress up generous slices of not so fresh sponge or plain cake. A fluff of whipped cream can top it off and give the final festive touch. Or serve a rhubarb shortcake with a good, rich biscuit dough baked to a pleasant brown and slit to be filled and topped with loads of thick, sweet rhubarb sauce.

RHUBARB AND PINEAPPLE MARMALADE.

4 cups sugar.
1½ cups diced pineapple.
2 lemons, rind and juice.

Cut the rhubarb in one inch pieces and combine with the other ingredients. Boil till thick and clear. Seal at once in sterile glasses.

STRAWBERRY RHUBARB CONSERVE.

Here's something to spread on those hot biscuits next October: It takes a quart each of hulled strawberries and finely cut rhubarb, plus six cups of sugar. Mix and cook until thick. Pack in hot sterile jars.

Brilliant Colors Being Worn on the Tips of Milady's Toes

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

You may have no intention of being one of the bold pink-toed boulevardieresses when the hot season rolls around. Truly, we hope you're not contemplating polished toenail exposure away from the beach. And not because Grandmammer wouldn't approve, but for the same reason that an unstockinged leg never looked as pretty as a stockinged one. And there's always that good old 'magination that has to be catered to in matters of beauty.

BUT—I believe that foot beauty would take on a great impetus from the toe nail polish dabbling. I base this conviction on observation of what happened to the hands of American women once they all got in the swing of manicure and finger nail tinting. Then pride of hand was born. So you see today more well groomed hands, better looking hands on all kinds of occupations than was dreamed of some years back.

And I mean the whole hand has improved as the result of the original nail beauty concentration. So, if toes are in for a season or period of glorifying with crimson, coral, or opal polish, women will get better acquainted with their feet and they'll develop a greater pride and eventually the foot ailments will show an appreciable reduction.

Certainly no woman with a yen for a tinted toenail will go in for ingrown nail trouble. Nor will she be proud of a corn crop on or between her toes. She won't be pleased with enlarged joints standing between her and foot beauty. Presently, then, she'll be telling the shoe man not to stint on the shoe size. She has to keep her feet beautiful.

You can talk till the cows come home to women about the health value of easy fitting shoes; about heels that allow for a proper body balance. But if they think the crowding, pressing shoe is going to make the foot look prettier, they'll have it, corn plasters and all. So, maybe this exploited nail tinting will work its own missionary charm. Personally, we think the trick could be turned without the polish. But if it's going to make you watch your feet, paint 'em canary yellow. Nile green or flaming red!

BRING ON THAT DERBY! CHICAGO FINDS A HORSE

He Is Adobe Post, Winner of Trial.

BY FRENCH LANE.

In our very wide open American Derby of next Saturday afternoon there is a chance for a Chicago victory, and a very bright chance at that.

The most powerful Chicago representative will be Adobe Post, owned by Dick Morris of the Board of Trade, and if Adobe Post runs as he did in the Niles Center purse at Washington Park yesterday, Mr. Morris will climb the steps into the stewards' stand and collect the beautiful Derby trophy along with some $50,000—which in these times will be much more beautiful than a trophy.

All Mr. Morris has to worry about is that Adobe Post didn't shake his Derby race out of his system while he was winning the Niles Center by half a length in a sensational finish from Yonkel, with Sunmelus, Willis Sharpe Kilmer's representative, third and five other Derby candidates trailing him home.

Turns in Distance in 1:41.

Adobe Post had to step the mile and 70 yards in 1:41, which was just a fifth of a second slower than the track record. He had to come from behind and he had to withstand a mighty last minute challenge from Yonkel, a Californian, and Sunmelus to get past the finish line with his nose in front.

There was a big crowd on hand and the Derby candidates absorbed all the interest. Even if some of the star 3 year olds are a bit lame and will not be able to go to the post, the result of the Niles Center shows that it is to be a thriller and that it may be run in sensational time.

Bill Elliott Rides Sunmelus.

More interest was aroused in the Derby prep because Jockey Bill Elliott, Phar Lap's old rider, was in the saddle on Sunmelus and because Tommy Woodcock, Phar Lap's trainer, saddled the Kilmer colt.

Don't think these Australians are strangers in a strange land. Sunmelus stepped right to the front and for three-quarters of a mile showed all the others his heels. Then when the others moved up on him in the stretch Elliott proved that he knew how to save ground and how to drive a horse with heel and whip.

When Sunmelus wanted to call it a day and stop Elliot wouldn't let him. He was in next to the rail in tight quarters. To apply the whip Elliott was forced to use his left hand. He did it in smart fashion. This Australian-Kilmer combination cannot be forgotten entirely in the Derby.

Trails in Early Stages.

Adobe Post had trailed Sunmelus, Big Beau, and Our Fancy in the early stages, but Landolt moved with him at the head of the stretch. He soon mowed the leaders down and took up the pace making. Yonkel came from far back and was going fastest of all near the end but it took all he had to get up and beat Sunmelus by a half length. Big Beau was weakening near the end, but was fourth, just half a length in front of Our Fancy.

There was plenty of backing for Adobe Post and in the mutuels he paid $8.52. Yonkel was at $6.54 to place and Sunmelus paid $9.14 to show.

The Rose Hill purse brought some of the best 2 year olds here into action and Charley Fisher who was down from Detroit for the Republican convention arrived at the track in time to see his Esseff, a daughter of High Time, win it fairly easily.

Price Drops at Post Time.

Maybe the presence of Mr. Fisher in the paddock just before post time caused the price to drop. Anyway, his entry of Esseff and High Complexion ruled as the favorite. In the mutuel payoff the Fisher color bearer paid $6.12 to win. Levaal, a Kentucky colt, was second, but not bothering the leader much at the finish. Polyphote from the east tried to snatch the early lead and was well up all the way, but could only finish third.

One of the biggest bettings plunges of the Chicago season went amiss when Unencumbered was nosed out by the 20 to 1 shot Sandwrack in the fourth race.

In the Wake of the News

BRITISH GOLF.

WHEN Gene Sarazen won the 1932 British open golf title it was the eleventh American victory in the last twelve competitions. Not only that, but his score of 283 for 72 holes established an all time low stroke record for this event.

JIM BARNES.

From such results the conclusion appears unescapable that American open golfers are superior to British. Especially so since British invasions against the United States open title show no comparable similarity. Indeed, their menace has been negligible in accomplishment during that period and we must go back to 1920 to find Edward Ray from across the pond as American open champion.

To any objection that some of these Americans taking British honors were expatriated British, just admit that fact for Jock Hutchison in 1921, Jim Barnes in 1925, and Tommy Armour in 1931, and there are still homebreds in Walter Hagen, Bobby Jones and Gene Sarazen, winners of eight championships.

What possibly makes this record more surprising and in a measure saves the face of the British is that our amateurs and women golfers in quest of similar honors have met scant success. Way back in 1904, Walter J. Travis captured the British amateur. Jess Sweetser was successful in 1926 and Bobby Jones in 1930. Bobby Gardner was runnerup to Cyril Tolley in 1920. These achievements were meager compared to the open competition yet we have had players abroad—fairly representative in most cases, sometimes quite formidable—every year. American women have yet to take a British national title, although they have won team matches.

1922—Walter C. Hagen	300
1923—Arthur G. Havers (British)	295
1924—Walter C. Hagen	301
1925—Jim Barnes	300
1926—Robert T. Jones Jr.	291
1927—Robert T. Jones Jr.	285
1928—Walter C. Hagen	292
1929—Walter C. Hagen	292
1930—Robert T. Jones Jr.	291
1931—Tommy Armour	296
1932—Gene Sarazen	283

MAYBE SAD SAM WILL CHEER UP NOW

Sad Sam Jones, White Sox pitcher, was plenty that way until yesterday when he watched his teammates overcome a 6-0 lead and beat Boston, 7-6. Now maybe the boys will make some hits when Sam pitches. (TRIBUNE Photo.)

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The White Sox yesterday crashed out of their state of coma with a bang to win themselves a 7 to 6 victory over the Boston Red Sox after having trailed 6 to 0 at the end of the fifth inning. The strongheart tableau was performed with two runs in the sixth inning and five in the seventh.

Paul Gregory, relief for Rookie Smith, who failed to survive the first inning, got credit for the joyous revival, though he had been retired for a pinch batter before the big works really got under way. It was Paul's second win of the season and his claim was justified, for he allowed only three hits, all singles, in the 6 1-3 innings he was in there. Two runs were made off his stuff, these being traceable to two of the six passes he issued. Red Faber pitched the last two innings and allowed no one to reach first base.

Aha! Some Real Hits.

The White Sox again were helped by the presentation of unearned runs, four of their total having been uncarned, but with it all was some nice smacking that should not be discounted. There was nothing phoney about vital doubles cracked by Kress, Selph and Fothergill and equally bonafide were singles by Fothergill, Funk, and Hayes. All of these hits were essential in the accomplishment of victory.

The victory was made especially heroic through the fact that in the first five innings the White Sox got only one man to second and none to third. In the meantime the Red Sox had scored four runs and five hits off Smith in the first inning and had come back for two more off Gregory in the fourth.

Red Sox Get Tough.

It surely was impertinent the way the Red Sox jumped on our lads in the first inning. Van Camp was called out on a close decision by Umpire Ormsby, but Watwood singled to center. Grube's snap throw designed to sink Watwood off first caught Sullivan in a campus reverie and the ball went into right field, enabling Watwood to sprint from first to third, whence he scored on McManus' single to left. Marty went to second while Webb was being retired, Sullivan to Smith, and scored on Jolley's single to right.

Rhyne singled off Sullivan's bare hand, Jolley (if you can imagine it) racing to third. Pickering then doubled off the scoreboard in left center, scoring Jolley and Rhyne. Gregory relieved Smith and walked Connolly. Durham fouled to Hayes.

The Red Sox broke loose again in the fourth. Pickering walked and stole second, and then Connolly walked. The runners moved up on Durham's sacrifice and Pickering scored on Van Camp's liner to Seeds. Watwood singled to left, scoring Connolly.

Big Stuff Starts in Sixth.

In the sixth Hayes became the second Chicagoan to reach second base when he got there on Pickering's overthrow of first. Selph fouled to Connolly, but Kress emerged from his batting slump and cracked a double off the scoreboard in left center, scoring Hayes. Red went to third while Sullivan was rolling out to Van Camp and scored while Fothergill was beating out a slow roller toward third.

The manner in which the Sox broke through in the seventh was most refreshing. Grube walked and lingered while Hodapp, batting for Gregory, flied to Watwood. Funk singled to right, Grube stopping at second. Hayes singled to center, Grube scoring and Funk stopping at second. Selph doubled along the left foul line, scoring Funk and Hayes, and took third on the throw to the plate. Moore relieved Durham. Kress' grounder shot between Warstler's heels, Selph scoring the tying run and Kress reaching second on the error. Sullivan grounded to McManus, but Fothergill doubled to left center, scoring Kress with the winning run.

Ruth, Foxx Get Homers; A's, Yanks Win

Cleveland, O., June 13.—(AP)—Sensational fielding by Ben Chapman, Lyn Lary, and Tony Lazzeri in the ninth inning saved Lefty Gomez today and enabled the star southpaw to hang up his twelfth victory as the Yankees nosed out the Indians, 8 to 7.

Babe Ruth clouted his 21st home run of the year in the fifth inning with one on. But it was Bill Dickey's big bat that eventually spelled victory. Dickey hit two homers, a single, drove across three runs and scored three himself. Score:

TIGERS LOSE, 8 TO 1.

Detroit, Mich., June 13.—(AP)—Robert Moses Grove of the Philadelphia Athletics won his 11th consecutive game today, beating Detroit, 8 to 1, and allowing four scattered hits.

Tommy Bridges replaced Goldstein in the ninth with Jimmy Foxx the first man up. With the count at three and two, Foxx slammed his 23d home run of the season over the left field fence. It was one of the longest hits ever seen at Navin field. Bridges yielded the Athletics another unearned run before retiring the side. Score:

Game's Off, So Cubs Sit and Wonder Who'll Be Traded

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Boston, Mass., June 13.—Much to their regret, the Cubs were denied another whack at the ambitious Braves today. Cool weather, wet grounds and possible showers were given as the local club's excuse for running out on the party, but the real reason probably was that Manager Bill McKechnie wanted time to reëstablish his forces after defeats by the Chicagoans on Saturday and Sunday.

WILLIAM VEECK.

Still another reason for the Cubs wanting to play was that they craved something to occupy their minds for the afternoon. They didn't want to sit around and worry about the possibilities of a trade being consummated before the deadline next Wednesday at midnight. Half of them seem to think they may not get out of Boston with the team tomorrow evening.

Pitcher May Figure in Trade.

They sat around in the hotel lobby this afternoon like a batch of mourners and actually turned white whenever they saw President William Veeck and Manager Rogers Hornsby in whispered conference. The bosses insist there is nothing on the fire, but the players keep right on wearing their funereal expressions.

As a matter of fact none of them has reason to worry about being traded, unless it should be a pitcher. That is about the only man Hornsby could spare and even a pitcher couldn't be dispensed with profitably unless it was in a swap for a hard hitting outfielder. That, as has been mentioned before, is what the Cubs will have to land if they are to develop into pennant winners. It is all right to say that they are in first place and going along impressively, but their hitting is weak. They've been winning on pitching, brilliant fielding, and on a sort of uncanny knack Hornsby seems to have for guessing right.

The infield as now made up has been knocking the eyes out of the experts at all stops, but nobody knows how long that can keep up. Herman, English and Jurges have been coming up daily with stops that have to be seen to be appreciated. Grimm has been doing his share by capturing the ball throws the young fellows are inclined to let loose after their dizzy pickups. But all this sensational work is being done under a tension that is bound to break down eventually. Then the hitting will be needed.

Cuyler Says He Isn't Ready.

If Cuyler can get back and resume his normal pace it will mean a lot, but he can't be counted upon until he actually proves he hasn't been slowed down by the foot fracture suffered six weeks ago. Hornsby wants him to play right away, but Kiki insists the injured member is giving him great pain. The pain is not in the small toe which was broken, but in the ball of the foot. This is said to be the result of a tight cast worn for more than a month. There is just a possibility that if a left hander should work for the Braves tomorrow Cuyler might be shoved into the lineup despite his desire to take things easy for another week.

Malone vs. Brown Today.

When and if Cuyler resumes his work in center, Johnny Moore probably will be shifted over to right. Moore's hitting has been only fair for an outfielder, but he has come up frequently with a hit which drove in the winning run. He doesn't like left handed pitching, but Hornsby can relieve him against southpaws. The Boss hasn't been hitting, but with a little more practice believes he can get back to his original form.

Pat Malone, seeking his sixth win, will do the pitching in the final here tomorrow. Bob Brown is due for the Braves unless Boss McKechnie should change his mind and slip in Ed [Lefty] Brandt, who usually is effective against the Cubs.

New York, June 13.—[Special.]—Blind Bowboy, ridden by his youthful owner, G. H. [Pete] Bostwick, took the lead at the rise of the barrier in the mile of the Old Rosebud claiming handicap at Aqueduct today, and made every pole a winning one to score by a half length over his five rivals. Flaming finished second, a length and a half in front of Helianthus, the favorite.

Helianthus was placed on the outside when he refused to enter the stall and suffered at the start, leaving in last position. Blind Bowboy showed the most early speed and quickly gained the rail. Waylayer and Flaming were running in closest pursuit.

Gets Bad Break on Turn.

Flaming was shuffled at the turn and Jockey Gilbert was forced to pull up, but once in stride he closed courageously to reach a contending position at the head of the stretch.

Blind Bowboy continued to show the way in the stretch run, but Flaming closed stoutly to finish second, Helianthus raced evenly throughout the mile journey to finish in third position. The winner was overlooked in the betting and closed at 8 to 1. The time was 1:38.

Magyar Wins at 12-1.

Magyar, outsider in the field of nine 3 year olds which contested the final mile and a sixteenth gallop, proved a driving winner over Action, with Don Tasker third. Not until the last few strides did Magyar gain a slight lead which proved the deciding margin. Action moved into second place, a head in front of Don Tasker, the favorite. The winner paid 12 to 1 and stepped the route in 1:47 2-5.

No other admitted trials were rowed today, although Syracuse, Navy, and Columbia covered the course. Their coaches, however, said no watches were held.

JOCKEYS SMITH, JONES FIGHT FOR PREMIER TITLE

Two veterans are staging a merry battle for the jockey championship at Washington park. They are Jimmy Smith and Bobby Jones. Each has won 11 races. Neither was able to ride into the winner's circle yesterday. Charley Allen is in third place with nine winners.

Boatswain, winner of the Withers in New York, will be stylishly late in arriving from his American Derby engagement. He leaves New York tomorrow and will arrive here Thursday. His only workout before striving for the $50,000 prize will be a light blow out on Friday morning.

Stepenfetchit is doing his Derby drills at Arlington Park. He arrived there yesterday with a dozen others owned by Mrs. Jock Whitney. He will be vanned over to Washington park on Friday. Jockey Buddy Ensor is coming on to ride him. A dangerous combination.

Gallant Knight thrilled the clockers at Washington park yesterday when he worked a mile and an eighth in 1:54 after stepping the mile in 1:39 3-5. Even Old Jim Farley fell off his roost and broke the crystal on his watch.

Reports from New York are that Burgoo King is so badly crippled no attempt will be made to get him back to the races this year. He is to be sent to Col. E. R. Bradley's Idle Hour farm for a long, lazy rest. However, Col. Bradley is coming on for the Derby to see the colts start fighting for the 3 year old championship for which Burgoo King had made such a bold bid.

Curly Burnbrack vs. Turchik.
Les Trace vs. Les White.
Rudy Pach vs. Al Levenberg.

Les is a son of Ed White, manager of Jim Londos, and former Chicago wrestling promoter.

ATTACHMENT IS FILED FOR PRIMO AGAINST MAX

New York, June 13.—(AP)—An order attaching the property of Max Schmeling, heavyweight boxing champion, as the result of a suit brought by Primo Carnera, Italian boxer, was filed in the county clerk's office today.

Carnera began the attachment proceedings on the eve of Schmeling's contest with Jack Sharkey, although he started the suit months ago. Carnera asks $100,000 damages for Schmeling's alleged failure to box him under a contract last September.

Schmeling's answer asserted the state boxing commission released him from the contract because of an injured finger.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., June 13.—Francis Gallet, golf professional at Blue Mound Country club here, and one of the five Wisconsin players eligible for the national open tournament week after next, will play an exhibition match at Oshkosh tomorrow. He will be paired with Dr. William Schaller against George Calderwood and Doc Stratton. Gallett will appear at Michiwaukee here Thursday in another match.

New York Will Give Sarazen Official Welcome

New York, June 13.—[Special.]—Gene Sarazen, newly crowned British open champion, will receive an official city welcome on Friday when he arrives in New York on the Cunarder Mauretania. The stocky Lakeville professional will be met in the bay by the mayor's sports committee in the official cutter, the Macom. The party then will proceed to city hall for an official reception by Mayor Walker.

Mills to Play 2 Games with Duffy Florals

The Duffy Florals and the Mills will oppose each other Sunday in a double header at Mills stadium. Doug McWeeney and Lefty Sullivan, who pitched brilliantly in the double defeat administered the House of Davids last Sunday, will face the Florals.

GIANTS TO PLAY COALS.

The American Giants will oppose Spencer Coals, Midwest league champions, in a twilight exhibition game Thursday at Portage Park, Central avenue and Irving Park boulevard.

Dublinsky Can Cash Victory Over Canzoneri at Any Bank

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Harry Dublinsky, the west side lightweight, can win recognition if he defeats Tony Canzoneri, the division champion, Thursday night at Sparta field. But while recognition may bring him a higher rating by the National Boxing association in the quarterly standings, it also will bring better financial opportunities, which is far more important.

Dublinsky has set some kind of a record himself in purchasing tickets for his friends and relatives. He almost wiped out the first row by reserving 25 seats, 17 of which will be occupied by brothers and sisters. Harry is number 18 in a family of 21 children. This family delegation breaks the Chicago all time record formerly held by King Levinsky.

$1,500 Biggest Purse.

Boxing has provided Harry with a fair livelihood, but not with enough to lay up any coin against a rainy day. His largest purse was the $1,500 he received for beating Tommy Grogan at the Stadium more than a year ago. And this isn't net, considering management and training expenditures.

Tony Canzoneri certainly belongs to the aristocracy of the ring. Champion of the lightweights, former featherweight champion, he ranks as one of the most popular of fighters as well as one of the best, weight considered. Then, too, he has been one of the leading money makers. His record purse, $22,387.97, was earned in Chicago last year when he knocked out Jack Kid Berg in the third round for the junior welterweight title.

In thirteen fights in Chicago Tony has collected more than $140,000 in five years. In 1929 Canzoneri passed the twenty grand mark in Chicago when he lost to Sammy Mandell at the Stadium. That night Tony got $21,200 and he was on the short end of the payoff.

What They've Collected.

GOV. EMMERSON TO OPEN LINKS AT LINCOLN PARK

Star Pros Also to Lend Aid Tomorrow.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

A new member will join Chicago's public links family tomorrow with the opening of Lincoln Park's new nine hole course. The new field and clubhouse, at the foot of Waveland avenue, also will be opened during the dedicatory exercises. Gov. Louis L. Emmerson will drive the first ball as a member of a foursome of officials, which will include Warren Wright, president of the Lincoln Park board. The course will be opened for public use at 5 o'clock Saturday morning.

Following the opening foursome around the course tomorrow will be a quartet of local stars, including Chick Evans of Edgewater, Harry Cooper of Glen Oak, Jock Hutchison of Glen View, and Laurie Ayton of Evanston. After these will come a foursome composed of Mrs. Lillian Zech, city parks champion; Marjorie Rosslein, Lincoln park titleholder; Mrs. Ness Cooper, state parks champion, and Tillie Langer, former Lincoln park champion. A foursome of park commissioners and another quartet, including four Lincoln park stars, also will try out the new course.

First Course Open in 1918.

The first nine hole course at Lincoln park was opened in 1918 and last year attracted 120,000 players. The new one, which extends from Waveland to Montrose avenues, is laid out on 71 acres of made land. It was completed at an approximate cost of $25,000 an acre, which includes the reclamation of the land. Funds for its construction, which has taken three years, were authorized by the state legislature. The yardage by holes follows:

Hole— 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9

The course is 3,285 yards long. Par for its nine holes follows:

4 5 3 4 5 3 4 4 4 —36

Reservations Are Available.

Nonreservation fees on the course will be 35 cents a nine hole round. Reservations may be made up to a week in advance of the time of play for 50 cents.

Such is the motto on the program of the Illinois Seniors' Golf association, which will hold its ninth annual spring tournament at the Olympia Fields Country club tomorrow. The motto is explained in the ages of the four classes who will compete in the tournament. The classes are: A—70 years and over; B—65 to 69 years, inclusive; C—60 to 64 years, inclusive, and D—55 to 59 years, inclusive. Members under 55 will register in class D.

The privileges of the club will be open to seniors who wish to play today, but only the first 18 holes played tomorrow will figure in the final prize reckoning. There will be six prizes in each class, two for low gross, three for low net, and one for the fewest putts. In case of ties the elder contestant will be declared the winner. Charles F. Thompson is chairman of the tournament committee and Charles B. Spaulding and Joseph G. Davis, chairman and vice chairman, respectively, of the handicap committee.

The first golf tournament and outing of the Holy Name society of St. Francis Xavier church of La Grange will be held at the Glen Oak Country club, June 22. P. F. Kuhlman, chairman of the golf committee, announces that more than 50 reservations have been made for the event, which will be at eight holes medal play.

The Crystal Lawns Country club will hold its first annual open tournament next Monday. It will be at 36 holes medal play, the entry fees to be used to purchase prizes for the amateurs and to be divided among the professionals. Entry is $3 and should be sent to Jack Wolfe, care of the Crystal Lawns Country club, Joliet, Ill.

William K. Alling became a hole in one marksman Saturday when he sank his mashie shot on the 208 yard eighteenth at the Evanston Community course.

Olympia Fields will be the scene of another big tournament Thursday when the South Side Swedish club competes over two of its courses.

Few golf clubs go through nine years with nary a hole in one ever being made on them, but that was the Vernon Country club's boast until the other day, when A. J. McGivern, 1508 Lunt avenue, sank his tee shot on the 115 yard fourteenth. Witnesses were F. W. Sextro and W. S. Lakey.

The Electrical Maintenance Engineers of Chicago will hold their annual golf tournament tomorrow at the Silver Lake Golf and Country club 151st street and 82d avenue. There will be prizes for blind bogey and low gross.

More than a hundred members of the Golden Roosters, wholesale jewelers' organization, will gather for their annual field day at Vernon Country club Thursday.

The Traffic Club of Chicago will hold the first of its four 1932 golf tournaments Thursday at the Cherry Hill Golf club, 191st street and Kedzie avenue. More than 150 members and their guests are expected to compete.

The results of yesterday's Chicago Women's District Golf association west side team matches, held at the Glen Oak Country club, follow: First division, Edgewood Valley, 9; La Grange, 3. Second division, Edgewood Valley, 4; Brookwood, 3.

The scores in the competition held at the Edgewood Valley Country club were: First division, Medinah, 10; Maywood, 2. Second division, Medinah, 4½; Glen Oak, 7½.

Yale to Defend Team Title in College Golf

Hot Springs, Va., June 13.—[Special.]—Harvard, Yale and Princeton, the big three in intercollegiate golf, will be represented by six man teams when the stars of America's universities match shots over the Cascades club course in the national intercollegiate golf tournament which opens here June 27.

A field of over 100 has ben promised for the team and individual championships. It will be Yale's task to retain the team title won at Olympia Fields last year. Princeton's 1931 captain, George T. Dunlap Jr., last year's individual champion, has been graduated. Billy Howell of Washington and Lee, sensation of the 1931 National Amateur and winner of several tournaments played over the Cascades links, will be a top favorite to capture the title vacated by Dunlap.

Have to Hit 'Em Straight.

Accuracy will be the watchword for the college golfers. The Cascades fairways are narrow and are bounded by thick woods and deep ravines. The greens are thickly and cannily trapped, particularly the one shotters, each of which demands a direct shot to the flag. The course is 6,537 yards long, par is 71, and the player who does not hit his shots down the alley will come to grief. On the outgoing nine there are six par 4 holes, two par 3s and one par 5. Coming in there are three par 5s, three par 3s, and three par 4s.

Billy Howell and T. Philip Perkins, former British amateur champion, each have scored par 71s over the Cascades and jointly hold the course record. At the age of 16 Billy won the Virginia state championship in 1928. He repeated in 1930. Last spring he bested Perkins to win the Old Dominion championship, a tournament which has been played at the Cascades for the last two years.

Two Day Qualifying Round.

The intercollegiate tournament will last during the entire week of June 27. The team championship, to be determined by 36 holes of medal play with 18 being played each day, will be held on Monday and Tuesday. The qualifying rounds in the individual event also will be held on these days.

Thirty-two will qualify for the first and second round match play Wednesday. The matches will be 18 holes. The quarter-finals, 36 holes, will be held Thursday and the semi-finals, also 36 holes, on Friday. The finals Saturday will be 36 holes.

Tigers Send 2 to Red Sox to Get Webb

Boston, Mass., June 13.—[Special.]—President Bob Quinn of the Boston Red Sox announced today that Earl Webb, heavy hitting outfielder, has been traded to the Detroit Tigers for Dale Alexander, first baseman, and Roy Johnson, outfielder.

The deal, President Quinn, said will give the last place Red Sox additional hitting strength in the infield, for Alexander batted .325 last season, and a polished outfielder in Johnson, whose 1931 batting mark was .275.

Webb led the American league in making doubles last year, when he piled up a batting average of .333, the best Red Sox performance. He came to the club in 1930 and was a clumsy fielder during that year. He improved considerably last season, but this year he slumped badly, batting but .283 in 50 games and fielding .959.

ROTHROCK TO TORONTO.

John Rothrock, veteran outfielder, who came to the White Sox from Boston, yesterday was released on option to the Toronto club of the International league.

Black and Neigenfind Lead Western State Nine

Kalamazoo, Mich., June 13.—[Special.]—Frederick Black, Kalamazoo, and Victor Neigenfind, Sebewaing, both seniors, were elected as honorary captains of the 1932 Western State Teachers college baseball team, undefeated in Michigan competition and winners of 12 of 15 games. Both were pitchers. Harry Emery, Detroit, was elected honorary captain of the frosh team.

Spider Pladner Defeats Willie Davies in 10 Rounds

TORONTO, Ont., June 13.—(AP)—Emile (Spider) Pladner of France outpointed Willie Davies of Charleroi, Pa., in a ten round bout here tonight. Superior punching ability, backed by an airtight defense, gave the Frenchman the unanimous decision of the judges and referee. Pladner weighed 117½ pounds; Davies 118¼.

Left Handed Golfers Name Babe Ruth as President

Cleveland, O., June 13.—(AP)—The American Left Handed Golfers' association was formed here tonight and elected Babe Ruth president. The organization was promoted by Everett G. Livesay of Columbus, O., Mason-Dixon champion.

ILLINI CAPTAIN SEEKS STATE TITLE

James B. (Scotty) Reston, Dayton, O., captain of the University of Illinois golf team, will seek the state amateur title this week at Champaign. Pros started play yesterday and the amateurs' qualifying round opens tomorrow.

Lyons Is Good Guess as Sox Pitcher Today

The pitching guesses for yesterday's game can stand for today, that is, Bob Weiland for the Red Sox and Ted Lyons for the White Sox. Ted Lyons may be saved for the Yankee opener or the exhibition at Waterloo Friday, but this scarcely seems probable.

When Red Kress came out of his protracted batting slump with a handsome double to drive in the first Chicago run of the game, the Sox perked up like each had been accorded a shot in the arm, the sock was so inspirational.

And the Yankees come to town tomorrow to play four games in five days, the gap being on Friday. The south side folks are expecting to entertain many customers during the series. It must be said that the popcorn and pop store is looking forward to the series with much more pleasure than the Sox pitchers.

MICHIGAN STATE LOSES 34 FROM SPORTS SQUADS

East Lansing, Mich., June 13.—[Special.]—Thirty-four Michigan State college athletes have been lost by graduation and the three year rule.

Of the major sports track supplies the largest number of graduates. Ten men who have won letters are to finish. Baseball and basketball each supplies six, football five, and there are fifteen who have played on minor sports teams.

Clark S. Chamberlain, who won more recognition as a distance runner than any other in Spartan history, leads the track group. Others are Paul A. Bayliss, Clifton A. Cobb, Reuben E. Dill, Kenneth E. Lafayette, Charles H. Lisch, Robert L. O'Connor, Capt. Melville E. Pflug, Edgar C. Ryon, and Earle H. Steimle.

Dee Pinneo and Randall Boeskool, co-captains of the 1931-'32 team; John A. Barnard, Harold E. Haun, Henry Schau, and Edward W. Scott, are the basketball graduates.

BATON WIELDERS SWING A MEAN GOLF CLUB, TOO

Chicago's orchestra leaders forgot blare and blue notes yesterday long enough to journey out to the Bryn Mawr Country club for their first annual golf tournament. Thirty-two baton wielders took up drivers and putters for 36 holes. The championship, decided on the basis of low net, was won by Gus Arnheim, who turned in a card of 201—70—131 for the 36 holes. Mac Macloud was next with 221—44—177. Johnny Maitland shot the best gross score of the day, opening with 82 and finishing with 86 for a total of 168. Joe Sanders took second prize with 105—92—197. The booby prize went to Tom Carlin, with 275 strokes. Eddie Neibaur was adjudged the best dressed golfer present, while Chet Hammer won the guest prize with 80—78—158.

Wilcox Nears Frame in Race for Auto Title

Although Sunday's 100 mile national championship event at Roby speedway will be only the third title race of his career, Howard [Howdy] Wilcox expects to finish among the leaders.

When Wilcox goes into the Roby race he will be only 140 points behind Fred Frame, Indianapolis winner, in the national point standing. Victory Sunday will be worth 120 points.

Although Wilcox bears the same name as the famous driver who won the 1919 Indianapolis classic and lost his life at Altoona in 1923, they are not related.

HARTZ WINS TROPHY

Indianapolis, Ind., June 13.—[Special.]—The most valuable trophy ever given in the history of automobile racing, the Wheeler-Schebler cup, has found a permanent home after 21 years of wandering.

Harry Hartz of Los Angeles, Cal., one time cycle car driver, then racing mechanic, star driver and racing car owner, gets the solid silver cup, which has been in the temporary possession of a score of the country's greatest racing drivers and car owners.

When the Indianapolis motor speedway was built in 1909, Frank Wheeler, one of the owners, decided his company would give the most valuable trophy ever offered for participation in automobile racing. Accordingly he had the cup, which is eight feet tall and two feet in diameter, designed.

The deed of gift provided that it must be won three times by a car owner with the same make of car.

Frame Comes Through.

In 1930 Billy Arnold, driving a Miller-Hartz Special front drive, won the cup by leading at 400 miles. He also won the race. In 1931 he won it again by leading at the 400th mile, and then he crashed through the northwest corner safety wall of the Indianapolis speedway and was seriously injured. His winning of the cup twice put two legs of it in the possession of Hartz, who owned his car.

This year Hartz entered the same car with which Arnold had won two legs of the cup and a second car, also a front drive car of Miller ancestry, driven by Fred Frame. Arnold went through the wall again in the 59th lap, and Frame, driving easily, went on to win the cup at the 400th mile post and still further to win the race in record breaking time, 104.144 miles an hour.

SLAUGHTER MADE FAVORITE OVER SALTIS THURSDAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., June 13.—Sammy [Kid] Slaughter, recognized as one of the world's ten leading middleweights by the National Boxing association, today became the favorite to beat Bud Saltis of Chicago in their eight round boxing contest on the Arcadia A. A. card here Thursday night. Slaughter and Saltis, who have met twice, will complete heavy training tomorrow afternoon. It will be Slaughter's third Milwaukee ring appearance and his first here since his surprise ten round decision over Dave Shade.

The semi-final, also an eight rounder, will bring together Charley Crocker of Iron Mountain, Mich., and Glen Camp of Kewanee, Ill., at 138 pounds. A new four round preliminary has been added to the program, according to Matchmaker Joe Krause. It will involve Joe Tesch and Len Bernstein, Milwaukee 142 pounders, and was necessary when Krause could find no suitable opponent for Johnny Lombardo.

Blues Pound Out 19-10 Win Over Red Birds

Columbus, O., June 13.—(AP)—Kansas City evened the series here today by defeating the Red Birds, 19 to 10, before a Ladies' day crowd of 6,313.

The Blues rolled up a commanding lead in the first part of the game against the pitching of Carmen Hill and Walter Miller. After the Red Birds had staged an eight run rally in the sixth to chase Hobo Carson off the mound, the Blues came back to touch Sheriff Blake for six runs in their eighth and clinch the victory.

CORBETT VISITS SCHMELING AND STAYS TO CHEER

Stamina of Champion Is Amazing to Jim.

"The man's condition is amazing," murmured Corbett, as Schmeling glided about the ring, hooking, jabbing, uppercutting, and jolting Lou Barba, his first opponent. "He's as cool as an icicle, and is hitting better than ever. See how he throws that right? Great. I see he has shortened the punch. That's very good. He's hitting better to the body, also. Wow! Look at that left hook. That was a peach. I never knew he had that. There it goes again.

Doesn't Need Footwork.

"He doesn't use his footwork much he doesn't have to. He just keeps going right in. With that style of his he makes the other fellow keep fighting. He's fast too. Very fast. He's always punching, or in a position to punch."

The first round ended.

The second round was another hard battle, for Barba is a good fighter, and a strong one. Schmeling then battled two hard, fast rounds with Big Chester Matan. Still Corbett eyed him. One more round, this time with the gigantic Dick Onken. Max came near putting him away in one round. That ended the boxing.

Max Counts on Stamina.

"I can see that Schmeling expects to outstay and outgame Sharkey," Corbett said. "He'll probably let his endurance win the fight for him. If Sharkey expects to win he'll have to do it in the first six or eight rounds. If he doesn't, it'll be just too bad for him. This fellow will be better in the last five rounds than he will be in the first ten. He speeds up as the fight goes on."

SHARKEY DODGES RAIN.

Orangeburg, N. Y., June 13.—[Special.]—Another heavy rainfall forced Jack Sharkey to work indoors today. Atmospheric conditions, which were gloomy and depressing, were reflected in the challenger's performance. He got off to a slow start in a five round workout with three sparring partners but was going at top speed at the finish.

Sharkey Gets in Close.

In his two round session with Lou Flowers, long armed Harlem Negro heavyweight, Sharkey concentrated on left and right drives to the body. He also did some effective punching at close quarters.

The smile that usually wreathes the countenance of Charley Anderson, veteran Negro heavyweight from Chicago, was wiped away by a wild left hook which nailed Anderson on the point of the chin and sent him to the floor just as time was called for the end of their one round bout.

Jack concluded the workout with four rounds of gymnasium work.

NEW SUIT FILED IN BATTLE OVER MORRISON WILL

16 Year Court Contest to Be Continued.

Sixteen years of litigation involving the $3,500,000 estate of Edward W. Morrison, the "millionless millionaire," a character in Chicago during the years it expanded from a village to a city and until his death in 1929 at the age of 93, was continued yesterday in the Circuit court. Mrs. Mary Ella Fowler of Waukegan, a grand niece, filed a bill to set aside Capt. Morrison's will, which directed that most of his wealth be used to found a home for aged men and women.

Mrs. Fowler, wife of Frank T. Fowler, a former Chicago alderman, began her suit on behalf of 14 heirs of "equal degree" who seek a distribution of the estate and ask that the court appoint a receiver to take charge of the assets now in the hands of the Chicago Title and Trust company, as trustee. The bill also asks that the court enjoin the trustee from forming the corporation which is to establish the "Morrison Home for the Aged." The will directed that this be done within three years after Capt. Morrison's death.

Point to Court Action.

The suit, which was drawn by Attorney Jerome J. Sladkey, recited that in January, 1917, Capt. Morrison, who had returned from 30 years of sea life to become a lavish spender of his father's $8,000,000 fortune among the city's brightest lights, was declared an incompetent and a spendthrift in Probate court proceedings. His fortune was placed in the hands of a conservator and he was given an allowance of $100 a week, the bill asserted.

Driven by his "dire necessity, need, and want," the bill charged, Capt. Morrison succumbed to the "wiles of certain unknown persons who wished to control his estate." Because he was 85 years old, feeble, and partially paralyzed, the bill stated, he agreed in October, 1921, to place his fortune in the hands of the Tile and Trust company and by stipulation was declared of sound mind, although still a spendthrift.

The bill charged that upon that day Capt. Morrison was not of sound mind and was persuaded to agree to the terms of the alleged conspirators through promises that his weekly income would be increased to $300.

Other Cases in Courts.

The court records show that the original suits against the captain were brought by two second cousins, Mrs. Sarah Morrison Smith and Mrs. Hazel Morrison, two of the heirs who are complainants in the present suit. They are of a group of heirs who are given equal shares in $100,000 under the will. Other suits against the estate were brought following Capt. Morrison's death by Mrs. Margaret Bernstein Morrison Beers and her sister, Mrs. Margaret Bernstein Brown of Dearborn, Mich. They were adopted by the captain, but the adoption has been declared void by Probate Judge Horner and their appeal is pending.

The will was drawn by Capt. Morrison on Dec. 6, 1921, when he was 85 years old. Codicils were drawn subsequently when he was 87, 88, and finally when he was 91 years old.

During all these times, the bill charged, he was under the influence of the alleged conspirators. The will was probated on June 13, 1931.

The suit yesterday was filed upon the last day in which such an action may be brought. The Illinois statutes provide that such a contest may be brought only within one year after a will has been probated.

MINE PARLEY MEETS; FAILS TO REACH TERMS

Representatives of the coal miners and operators of coal mines in Illinois, meeting yesterday at the Majestic hotel, adjourned until Wednesday without coming to an agreement on a new wage scale.

In Indiana, where a subcommittee of miners and owners agreed to a $4 a day scale last week, it was reported that the state wage conference had passed on the proposal to individual unions for their acceptance or rejection. A vote will be taken in each union and it was expected the results would be known by next Monday.

Until then, it was said, there is little likelihood the Illinois group will reach a definite decision. The Indiana and Illinois fields have hitherto operated under the same scale, $6.10 a day. Some of the Indiana coal mine owners, according to report, are so confident they have been soliciting orders in Chicago on that basis.

The old wage agreement in Illinois expired in March and the mines of the state have been virtually shut down since then. Gov. Emmerson urged the calling of the new conference last week in the hope that the 40,000 or more miners affected may be put back to work.

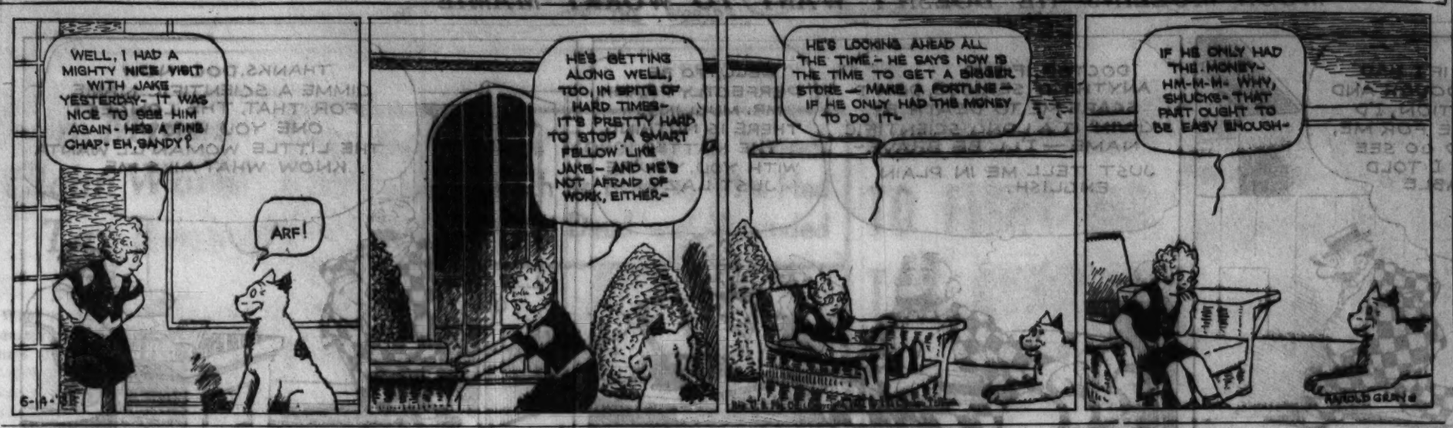
MRS. M. A. CONDON, WIDOW OF TURF RULER, IS DEAD

Mrs. Mary A. Condon, widow of "Blind John" Condon, who owned the Harlem race track in the early days of this century and also ran the Garfield park race track, died yesterday in her home at 442 Wellington avenue. She was 70 years old and had been ill since February.

The funeral will be held tomorrow morning from the residence. Requiem mass will be sung at 9:30 o'clock at Mt. Carmel church, on Belmont avenue near Broadway. Burial will be in Calvary.

"Blind John" Condon died in 1915, leaving his estate to his wife, his son, John S., and a daughter, Mrs. Marguerite C. Wright of Germantown, Pa. In 1921 it was valued at more than a million dollars. He was known as the ruler of the turf in six states, famous as a square gambler and as one who never turned down the appeal of a friend for aid. Before his death he had converted the old Harlem race track into a golf course which still is owned by his estate and it will be closed tomorrow in memory of Mrs. Condon.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Now Is the Time



W. C. REDFIELD, FORMER CABINET OFFICER, IS DEAD

Secretary of Commerce Under Wilson.

New York, June 13.—[Special.]—William C. Redfield, who was President Wilson's secretary of commerce, died some time in the night at his home in Brooklyn. He would have been 74 years old next Saturday.

Mrs. Redfield went to awaken him today and found him dead. It was unexpected, for the former secretary had been in excellent health, his son, Humphrey, said today. His widow, the son and a daughter, Mrs. Charles K. Drury of Brooklyn, survive.

A private funeral will take place tomorrow and burial will follow in Albany, Mr. Redfield's birthplace.

Became Tariff Expert.

He was educated in Albany and Pittsfield, Mass., went to work for a stationery firm in New York at the age of 19 years, but soon became bookkeeper and shipping clerk for J. H. Williams & Co. of Brooklyn, makers of iron and steel products. With this company he remained for twenty-two years, rising to the presidency.

In 1855 he was married to Elise Mercein Fuller of Brooklyn.

He went to Washington in 1910 as a member of the house of representatives, being considered a "business man's legislator," and became an authority on the tariff.

Cabinet Officer 6 Years.

He served in the house until 1913, when President Wilson made him secretary of commerce, a position he held throughout the war, finally resigning in 1919.

His war work included his helping to develop the war trade board, the bureau of standards and the council of national defense. His régime was also marked by the reorganization and expansion of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce.

One of his speeches on the tariff was a Democratic campaign document in 1912. His theory was that labor in the United States did not need the protection of a high tariff because the American workman's skill made up for lower wage scales in other nations.

WOMAN SEIZED AS SELLER OF POISON BOOZE

Mrs. Stella Shrem, 39 years old, an expectant mother, was arrested by police last night on informal charges made by Mrs. Mary Dzurney of 4338 South Hermitage avenue that Mrs. Shrem had sold her husband, Andrew Dzurney, 57, poison liquor which caused his death.

After spending several hours in a cell in the Hyde Park station Mrs. Shrem became ill this morning. She was rushed to the county hospital in a police patrol, accompanied by Dr. Samuel Parke, police physician, and two police matrons, Mrs. Louise Shaw and Mrs. Mary Bornstein. Late this morning Mrs. Shrem had not yet given birth to the expected child.

Dzurney, for whose death she was seized, died at home Sunday, and yesterday his widow told New City police she believed that he had died of poison booze purchased from Mrs. Shrem at her home at 4859 Honore street. Mrs. Shrem's arrest followed and she was ordered held for the inquest today.

Prescott, 63 years old, who was the drill master of the drum and bugle corps of the Board of Trade and several other American Legion posts in Chicago, will be held at 2 p. m. today at the Humboldt Park commandery, Kedzie and Fullerton avenues, followed by burial in Rosehill cemetery. Mr. Prescott, who died Friday in Edward Hines Jr. Memorial hospital, was a veteran of the Spanish-American war. He was a grandson of Edward and Elizabeth Twitty, Chicago pioneers, and besides his widow, Mrs. Ivy Baker Prescott, 4808 North Linder avenue, is survived by several brothers and sisters and two aunts, Misses Maretta and Stella Twitty of Oak Park.

Bandit Hides in Basement; Robs Store Clerks of $914

A bandit concealed himself in the basement of the Walgreen drug store at 150 North La Salle street last night. He emerged from his hiding place just as Harry Strunk, 849 Lill avenue, the manager, and Joseph Baumgartner, 419 Long avenue, a clerk, prepared to close. Menacing them with a pistol, the robber forced Strunk to open the safe. He took $900 from the safe, $9 from Strunk, and $5 from Baumgartner, and fled. A companion waited outside in an automobile.

TOKIO, June 13.—(AP)—The house of representatives today unanimously passed a resolution urging the government to call another extraordinary session of the diet as soon as possible to pass farm relief measures.

Japan's farmers are her most distressed class and the proposed relief measures include both ordinary legislation and appropriations. The resolution was sponsored by both the Seiyukei and Minseito parties.

Premier Saito indicated that the government intended to act quickly along the lines indicated. It was understood the cabinet already had agreed informally to reconvene the diet for this purpose late in August or early in September.

FIRST PHYSICIAN TO TEND LINCOLN WHEN SHOT DIES

Dr. Charles Leale Dead at Age of 91.

New York, June 13.—[Special.]—Dr. Charles A. Leale, the first surgeon to reach the side of President Lincoln on the night of his assassination in Ford's theater, Washington, and the last of the little group that stood at Lincoln's bedside in his last hours, died today at his home, 1261 Madison avenue. He was in his ninety-first year.

Dr. Leale was also the consulting physician during the weeks of effort to save the life of President Garfield, who also was assassinated. He retained an active interest in his profession until the end, and also was widely known as a philanthropist.

Born in New York.

He was born in this city March 28, 1842, the son of Capt. William Pickett Leale and Anna Maria Burr Leale, and the grandson of Capt. Richard Burr, who sent a cargo of corn to the famine stricken people of Ireland at his own expense in 1846.

After attending medical and surgical clinics in New York he served a full term as a medical cadet in the United States army, and later became acting assistant surgeon of the army and assistant surgeon of the United States volunteers. He was appointed executive officer and head of the ward for wounded officers in the United States army general hospital, Armory square, Washington, in 1865.

With Lincoln Until Death.

On the night of April 14, 1865, he was the first surgeon to reach President Lincoln after he was shot. He was placed in charge by Mrs. Lincoln and prolonged the President's life, remaining with him and holding his right hand when he died. His report of this was published in the medical and surgical history of the war of the rebellion.

After being mustered out of service in 1866 with the rank of captain, he worked abroad in foreign clinics, where he devoted much of his time to the study of Asiatic cholera. Returning to New York he opened an office for private practice and was active until a few years before his death.

He was the son of Zebulon M. Hall, pioneer ship owner and grocer at Randolph and Market street, where the building occupied by his company still stands on the northeast corner. Mr. Hall helped save his father's building during the Chicago fire by joining employes in dipping water from the river and pouring it on burning embers carried to the roof by the strong wind.

The Hall building was the only one in the neighborhood saved from the flames. Mr. Hall was in the wholesale paper business at 340 North Dearborn street.

SALTIS WINS POINT IN SUIT AGAINST CITY

Attorneys for Joe Saltis, former south side beer purveyor, yesterday spent five hours searching records in the office of Sheriff Meyering for a bond filed three years ago with a writ of replevin against the city for the recovery of 109 slot machines taken in a raid by federal agents in February, 1929.

The bond was necessary to complete the record before Circuit Judge William V. Brothers, who is hearing the case. After it was found the judge denied the demurrer of Assistant Corporation Counsel Stephen A. Malato, who sought to quash the writ on the grounds that the bond was missing. The judge set the case for hearing on July 18.

The machines were taken by the federal raiders from a garage at 3654 South Albany avenue with a quantity of liquor which was stored there. They were placed in storage in a police station. Later forty of the machines were stolen. When Saltis appeared in federal court after the raid he was fined $500 for violating the dry law. Last Sept. 14 he filed suit to recover the slot machines on the grounds that the raiders acted without a search warrant.

NORMAN HARRIS ACCEPTS SERVICE IN MYSTERY SUIT

Legal service was accepted yesterday by Norman W. Harris, vice president of the Harris Trust and Savings bank, in the $300,000 mystery suit filed against him last month by James G. Clark of Mount Kisco, N. Y. An answer to the suit will be filed in the Circuit court Monday.

The litigation is based on an alleged contractural act by which, it is declared, Mr. Harris on last Aug. 4 agreed to pay Clark $500 a month for life. In the declaration, filed by Attorney Thomas Hart Fisher, it is asserted that the banker abided by the contract for six months, then ceased payments.

Clark's wife, the former Dorothy Funk of Des Moines, obtained a divorce last year in Reno. She and Clark met while both were students at the University of Wisconsin.

Today, the statement said, he was brought back and handed over to the commanding officer of the emperor's troops.

A. F. BROOKS, 93, WINNETKA CRASH VICTIM, IS DEAD

Alden F. Brooks, 93 years old, 518 Elder Lane, Winnetka, a former portrait painter for whom President McKinley once sat, died yesterday from pneumonia following an automobile collision on June 10 at Elder Lane and Woodlawn avenue, in the north shore suburb.

With Mr. Brooks were his granddaughter, Miss Violet Wyld, who lived with him and who was driving, and his daughter, Mrs. George Maher of Kenilworth. Their machine was struck by that of Charles Knapp, 18 years old, 633 Forest avenue, Wilmette, and overturned. Mr. Brooks sustained a fractured collar bone. The women were only slightly hurt. Knapp, a senior at the New Trier township high school, was held on charges of involuntary manslaughter.

Samuel Greco, 17 years old, 724 Miller street, and Samuel Amato, 16, of 721 Miller street, who killed George Wilson, 50 years old, 1013 West Madison street, on Sunday, while speeding in an automobile they had stolen, were held to the grand jury on charges of manslaughter by a coroner's jury yesterday.

The death of Mr. Brooks and one other in Cook county yesterday brought the toll since Jan. 1 to 498. The victims:

RABBIT BARRED AS WITNESS IN TILTON'S TRIAL

A live guinea pig and a rabbit were taken into the Criminal court of Judge Rudolph F. Desort yesterday to give mute testimony to the effect of the cancer remedy of "Old Doc" Lester Tilton on normal tissue. They were barred from appearance in the case by defense objections that Tilton had made no representations as to the effect of his "cure" on animals.

He testified that he had applied the Tilton salve, which its maker had declared would not injure normal tissue, to the animals. On the direction of Prosecutor Charles Bellows to "show the jury," he started to draw the squealing rabbit from the cage.

Defense Attorney Stuart B. Krohn greeted the act with loud objections which were sustained by Judge Desort.

Dr. A. L. Cornett of Chicago Heights testified that he had performed an exploratory operation on the Rev. Peter Gall in 1921 and found no indication of cancer. Father Gall testified for the defense that he had been cured of cancer by Tilton.

BIG CITY BANKS GIVE NO SIGNS OF CREDIT HELP

Reduction in Loans Is Reported.

BY O. A. MATHER.

Another week has passed without any visible signs of the big city banks undertaking the credit expansion program that was heralded a few weeks ago by the federal reserve authorities. However, it should be said in justice to the banks that a considerable decline in deposits probably had made them more chary about expanding their loans and investments. Moreover, it is largely to the banks that the federal treasury is turning for absorption of the recent steady stream of new financing.

The federal reserve board made public yesterday its summary of the position of the weekly reporting member banks of the reserve system. These banks include institutions in the leading cities. The report shows that during the week ended last Wednesday these banks reduced their commercial loans by $125,000,000 and their collateral loans by $115,000,000. Therefore, it may be concluded that they continue steadily to liquidate loans of all classes.

Increase U. S. Investments.

However, these banks increased their investment in government obligations by $45,000,000, which probably reflects federal treasury financing. But they offset this buying by selling $115,000,000 of other securities. This latter decline would seem to indicate that the banks' "bond pool" originated in New York has not begun to really function.

The largest item in the statement concerns deposits. It shows that combined net demand and time deposits of these banks dropped $151,000,000, while government deposits receded $40,000,000, making a total decline of $191,000,000. The banks' reserve balance with federal reserve banks declined $19,000,000 and they increased their borrowings from the reserve banks by $10,000,000.

EXPECT INSULL AUDITS

Audits of the three big Chicago public utilities, the Commonwealth Edison company, Peoples Gas Light and Coke company, and the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois are expected to be completed today or tomorrow. The audits will first be submitted to the respective directorates, all of which are headed by James Simpson.

Later this week or possibly next week, Chicago and New York banks will make public offering of approximately $72,000,000 in bonds of the three companies. The proceeds will be used chiefly to pay off bonds maturing within the next two months. Whether the audits will be made public immediately or reserved until the bonds are offered was a question being debated by the bankers yesterday. Any way, it is understood they will show a combined writedown of between $80,000,000 and $90,000,000, which will not impair the capital of any of the companies but will sharply reduce their surpluses.

DIVIDEND ACTIONS

Directors' meetings of several companies for dividend action this week have attracted unusual interest. According to gossip in La Salle street directors of Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago mail order and chain store concern, will reduce the annual rate, which has been $2.50. Guesses on the new rate ranged from $1 to $1.50. Although the company is in strong cash position, volume of business and profits have declined considerably in the last two years.

Directors of the National Biscuit and Western Union Telegraph companies also are scheduled to take action. Opinion leans to the belief that the National Biscuit regular quarterly dividend will be paid but that the Western Union heads will take adverse action. The company's earnings statement for April showed a small loss. It was reported yesterday that the report of the William Wrigley Jr. on second quarter earnings will show its dividend earned and on that basis no change in the dividend is expected.

Iron Mines Claim World Tax Record

BY SCRUTATOR.

What the tax eaters can do to an industry when that industry is rooted where it stands and cannot move out of their jurisdiction is revealed in the story of the Minnesota iron mines.

Operators of those mines are greatly handicapped in their efforts to combat inordinate taxes. The mines cannot be moved from the state. They have large valuations and little voting power. And they turn out a product which is largely shipped out of the state.

Claims World Record.

John W. Hill of Pickands Mather & Co., Cleveland, who has forwarded some comments on this situation, says the iron ore business of Minnesota is the most heavily taxed industry in the world.

"Viewed as a whole," he says, "the Minnesota iron mining industry has paid in taxes in normal times more than one and a half times as much as it has paid in wages for producing its product. Its taxes in years of normal production have run more than 25 per cent of the value of the product. This compares with less than two per cent for industry as a whole throughout the country. Last year these taxes amounted to $1.16 a ton of ore shipped, and this year they will run over $2—probably close to the total value of the product."

Three Sorts of Taxes.

Minnesota has placed on its mines three separate and distinct kinds of taxes, an occupation tax for the privilege of running them, a royalty tax aimed at the fee owners but by a decision of the state Supreme court imposed on the operators, and an ad valorem tax which operators say is based on the highest valuations of any property in the state.

"The high ad valorem tax valuations," says Mr. Hill, "have resulted in the mines paying 90 to as high as 97 per cent of all of the taxes levied in many of the local communities.

"This, in turn, has naturally produced tremendous extravagance in these communities. For example, the annual budget of the village of Hibbing on the Mesaba range, with less than 15,000 population but a large mineral valuation, has exceeded that of the city of Duluth with more than 100,000 population."

Mine operators have done more than argue and litigate against high taxes. They have had to contract their operations, concentrating on the cream of the resources, of necessity leaving the economic future of the business to take care of itself.

So Employment Suffers.

Consequently, there has been a drying up of employment and a reduction of population. Future results will probably be a shortened life of the industry in the state through lack of development of the second class iron ore resources which would otherwise add much to Minnesota's wealth.

"St. Louis county, Minn.," Mr. Hill writes, "is the old established mining county of the state. In 1919 it had 114 iron ore mines in operation and 58 idle. In 1929 it had 57 mines in operation and 129 mines idle, in spite of the fact that 1929 was a banner year and even in Minnesota more ore was shipped than in 1919.

"In 1919 more than 21,000 men were employed in iron ore mining in Minnesota. In 1929, with the larger production, only 13,000 were so employed.

"The explanation is not to be found in the increased use of labor saving devices alone. The decline has been due largely to the fact that the tremendous taxes have forced the operators to concentrate their operations on the best and most efficient properties, which alone can bear the burden and survive.

"The annual tax bill of the mines of Minnesota is some $22,000,000. If this were cut in half, which would still leave the communities tax moneys well over the average for the state, 10,000 men could be employed at more than $1,000 each per year out of the savings."

MIDDLE WEST'S RECEIVERS WORK ON VARIOUS UNITS

Seek to Reorganize Entire System.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

As the first step in effecting a reorganization of the Middle West Utilities company, the receivers for the big utility holding company are devoting themselves to the task of putting the affairs of the various subsidiary companies in order.

With a view of fortifying the financial positions and replacing depleted cash reserves the preferred dividends of several of the subsidiary units have been suspended. Dividends on the senior stocks of the operating companies which have adequate working capital and satisfactory current earnings are being continued.

The ommission yesterday of the prior lien dividends of the New England Public Service company, a unit of National Electric Power eastern group of properties, was seen as a part of this program.

In concentrating on a program of reorganizing the subsidiary companies on a sound basis, the receivers hope to restore or enhance the value of the junior securities of these concerns which are held by Middle West. The method through which the holding company was able to control the affairs of its far flung system was through ownership of the junior voting stocks of subsidiary holding companies which in turn held voting control of subholding companies and so on until the operating unit itself was reached. Actual control was twice or three times removed from the top holding corporation in many instances.

Reorganization of the holding company itself must wait until the affairs of underlying properties are put in good shape. Many of the subsidiary companies, particularly the operating units, are in sound conditions now, but the problems of a score or more of the units remain to be worked out. Reorganization of the holding company is a matter which will probably not be completed for several years. In the meantime the fate of the security holders remains uncertain.

At their meeting yesterday New England Public Service directors voted to suspend payments on both the $6 and $7 prior lien shares.

BANKERS URGED TO FIGHT BIG TAX BURDENS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Rye, N. Y., June 13.—Members of the New York Bankers' association were urged today to crystallize public opinion in their respective communities toward the curtailment of governmental expenditures.

J. Stewart Baker, president of the association, in his address at their thirty-ninth annual convention here, asserted that a country that is profligate of its citizens' money and credit cannot hope to prosper.

Reparations and international debts, he said, are contributing more than anything else to the unsettled conditions in the world today. He added that the United States should stand ready to concede as much proportionately as any other nation so that the scaling down of reparations and other debts would require the same relative contribution from all the countries involved.

On this score, he pointed out that the amount of foreign government obligations owed to the United States for the last year for which a moratorium was granted, was $261,800,000, or less than 2 per cent of all our government costs. He added, however, that as a condition to our participation, an agreement should be required whereby all nations would cut their armament to a minimum.

Vast Rise in Expenses.

"In the nineteen year period, from 1913 to 1932," he said, "our total government expenses have risen by an amount equal to more than 50 per cent of the increase in our national income, so that today 25 per cent of our national income is being used for governmental expenses, against 8 per cent in 1913. At the same time our total debt has increased from $4,389,000,000 to $34,153,000,000, almost half of which is the debt of state and local governments which has increased $12,500,000,000 in the period. One cannot read the financial statements of small towns or large cities without being impressed by the extravagance that has characterized the conduct of their affairs."

In outlining the problems with which banks of the state and of the country are now faced, Mr. Baker cited the fact that with slackened business millions of dollars of lines of credit at the banks are unused while the companies are supplied with an overabundance of working capital for their present need.

Favors Reducing Securities.

"My suggestion is that those corporations which have too much working capital for their business which they can reasonably expect in the near future," said Mr. Baker, "to purchase their own securities and retire them. It seems to me that this would accomplish three things:

"First, it would reduce the amount of securities outstanding, which, in turn, would decrease collateral loans and tend to check the fall in security prices.

"Second, it would cause corporations to borrow from banks to take care of their seasonal requirements, thus increasing the supply of eligible commercial paper.

"Third, it would benefit the remaining bondholders and stockholders, for

Gold Exports Smaller Now; Import More

New York, June 13.—(AP)—Gold transactions, as reported by the New York Federal Reserve bank today, showed a small gain in favor of the United States, for the first time in weeks.

The net gain was of negligible proportions, amounting to $87,600, but it marked a break in the heavy outflow of gold which started in April.

At the same time the dollar was again strong in the foreign exchange markets, and while some difference of opinion was evident, many bankers were again of the opinion that the outflow was drawing to a close.

An export of $6,001,400 to Switzerland was announced, but of this amount $6,000,000 was taken from gold already under earmark for export and not counted in American stocks. There was an import of $89,000 from Mexico.

The lull in exports may have been partly due to a lack of desirable steamship sailings, but the outflow had been abating during the last few days.

Foreign exchanges softened in terms of the dollar today. Dutch guilders sagged 2 points, putting them again under the outgoing gold level, while French francs were off ⅛ point to 3.93⅞ cents for cables against the gold point of 3.94⅛. Belga eased. Swiss francs were about steady. German marks, Scandinavians, and Canadian dollars showed slight heaviness.

There was no visible spirit to the trading and the market appeared to be settling down to a routine, indifferent week to await developments at Washington and at the

N. Y. BOND MART LACKS SPIRIT, SO PRICES DECLINE

Slight Flurry Occurs in Foreign Section.

New York, June 13.—(AP)—The bond market lacked enthusiasm today, with traders and investors generally waiting for something to happen in Washington, in the Republican convention at Chicago and in the various European hot spots. As a result of the marking time attitude, prices drifted fractionally lower. Sales totaled only $7,086,000, the smallest full day's volume since April 25.

There was a slight flurry in foreign department, with issues of Austria, Australia, and Germany climbing from ½ to around 5 points. French loans, under pressure most of the day, also rallied moderately near the close of the session. British 5½s eased.

Strength of the Australians was attributed, in part, to the defeat of the Lang régime in New South Wales. Bonds of Germany and Austria were in demand on reports that the allied European governments might decide to lend these countries between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000 to aid them in overcoming their present financial difficulties.

Railway Bonds Irregular.

The railway average was the lowest of the domestic groups, although variousehigh grade carrier loans were comparatively steady. Santa Fe general 4s gained moderately and Union Pacific 4½s were up 2 points. Softness was shown by some loans of Baltimore and Ohio, Rock Island, Denver and Rio Grande, Illinois Central, Missouri Pacific, Pennsylvania, St. Louis Southwestern, and Southern Pacific. Pennsylvania general 4½s, however, advanced 1¼ points.

The industrials and utilities were featureless. Some bonds of Armour & Co. were in demand and New York traction loans were higher. Replogle Iron and Steel 5½s were up 4½ points. Power and Light company issues were easy.

The United States government list was steady throughout, the majority of liberties and treasuries retaining modest gains.

Curb Stock Marks Time.

The New York Curb market began the new week with traders generally marking time. The volume of trading dwindled to a bare 100,000 shares, the smallest for a full day since April 25.

In the utility issues, Electric Bond and Share gained ⅝, in a substantial turnover. American Gas and Electric common was steady, but the preferred broke to a new low in a thin market. Commonwealth Edison lost 3½ points. Utilities Power and Light 6 per cent preferred rallied nearly 3 points in a light turnover.

In the industrials, Deere was again moderately heavy. Aluminum company dropped 3 points in a small turnover. International Cigar Machinery, However, gained 3, and Quaker Oats, a lightly traded issue, jumped 5 points. Cross & Blackwell preferred, trading for the second time this year, sold at 3, off 11 points since it last appeared on the tape.

REALTORS PLAN A GOLF OUTING AT CHERRY HILL

Eighth Annual Event of Realty Board.

BY AL CHASE.

Realtors will hold their annual golf outing tomorrow at the Cherry Hill Golf club in Flossmoor. This will be the eighth of a series of yearly gatherings at Chicagoland country clubs by members of the Chicago Real Estate board. Alben T. Myren of the Chicago Title and Trust company is chairman of the sports and pastimes committee of the realty board and is in charge of the outing.

ALBEN T. MYREN.

In addition to the tournament competition for the winning of a silver loving cup, there'll be a program of novelty golf events, including a putting contest, a driving contest, and a shooting the bucket contest.

Numerous prizes, which, Mr. Myren states, will be in greater number than ever before, will be awarded the winners. The handicapping system created by Leo G. Varty, a member of the board, will be used to classify the players in the tournament. The outing will begin at 9 a. m. and will continue throughout the day.

Membership for Prize.

Among the special prizes that have been posted is an annual membership in the Cherry Hill Golf club, of which Percy E. Wagner, a member of the sports and pastimes committee, is managing director. Other special prizes will be given by J. Soule Warterfield, president of the Chicago Real Estate board; George F. Nixon, former head of that organization, and Fred W. Brummel.

Members of the sports and pastimes committee, in addition to Mr. Myren and Mr. Wagner, are James W. Bellanger, Will J. Bell, Kenneth C. Brown, Ronald J. Chinnock, Benjamin L. Coolidge, George L. Drollinger, James H. C. Hill, Hugh C. Michels, Austin H. Parker, Richard H. Peel, Stanley Roe, Edward J. Scott, George Stromberg, and Kenneth Calhoun Brown.

South Wabash Leases.

The Chicago Musical Instrument company has leased the four story and basement building at 309 South Wabash avenue, from Lawrence Heyworth and the entire third and fourth floors in the building at 307 South Wabash avenue from the Quaker Building corporation for a term of years at a reported aggregate rental of $95,700. Kuhn-Saipe & Co. represented all parties.

Extensive alterations, which will include the modernization of the premises under the direction of Koenigsberg & Westfeld, architects, will be started at once in order to be completed for the occupancy of the leassee on or about Sept. 1.

Gives Tract to Foundation.

Title to a ten acre tract at the intersection of the southwest highway and 127th street, was conveyed yesterday by Ernest G. Warner of Orland Park, to the Chicago Southwest Suburban Community Parish and Community Center Foundation. According to Lewis Macauley of Worth, president of the foundation, this is a gift by Mr. Warner, a pioneer farmer in the district. There is a building on the property which will be used for community gatherings, both recreational and devotional.

The deeds states the object of the foundation is "to serve mankind physically, morally, and spiritually, regardless of sex, color, or creed." President Macauley states that the Rev. Paul T. Saunders of Orland Park and one of the incorporators, is associated with Mr. Warner in the operation of the property. The other incorporators are: Elmer W. Lysen, Worth; Pearl F. Cooper and Clara L. Myrick of Orland Park, and Charles M. Mahaffay of Palos Park.

BANKERS URGED TO FIGHT BIG TAX BURDENS

Public Waste Is Called Menace to Nation.

securities, whether they be bonds, debentures or stocks, could be bought considerably below par or book value.

"How many securities could by this means be properly retired without jeopardizing the companies is problematical, but I venture to say that in the aggregate it would amount to many millions of dollars. If a few of our prominent corporations would take the lead in this, their example would be speedily followed by other companies of all sizes.

"There seems to me nothing radical in this plan, provided it is conservatively carried out. If when business expanded so rapidly, it was thought wise to increase working capital by selling securities to the public, now that business has contracted, it would seem logical to reduce working capital by repurchasing those securities."

Appeals for Railroads.

J. H. Hustis, vice president of the New York Central lines made a plea for a new era for the railroads. He asked the bankers to aid the carriers in removing the handicaps that now exist through regulation or legislation and prevent the carriers competing fairly with new or old forms of transportation, particularly such forms as are subsidized at public expense.

"Regulation as originally conceived and as carried down to the present time," said Mr. Hustis, "was to control monopoly, monopoly of transportation. The growth of other forms of transportation has absolved the railroads from the character of monopoly and placed them in a defensive competition against other public carriers having certain definite advantages at public expense and free from regulation having an conception that they are in the least respect a monopoly."

LARD WEAK

Lard futures lost 5@7½c of the recent advance of 35c, while hogs were stronger and higher at the best prices in a month. Weakness in wheat, however, had its effect on speculators and traders in general, and the volume of business was light and mainly in for September delivery.

Cash trade was fair, with regular lard $3.80, loose $3.22½, and leaf $3.25. Short ribs were $4.37½ and short ribs $4.25. Exports of lard for the week were 9,477,000 lbs, against 6,228,000 lbs last year. Of bacon they were 1,685,000 lbs, compared with 2,522,000 lbs last year. Liverpool lard was 3@6d net higher. A fair business was on in bellies, with prices 2½@5c higher. Hog receipts were slightly larger than a week ago, but materially less than last year. Prices follow:

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, June 13.—(AP)—SUGAR—Raw was more active today with spots advancing 5 points to the basis of 2.70c delivered. At this level a local refiner bought about 4,200 bags of St. Croix, 68,700 bags of Porto Rican, and 37,700 bags of Philippines, and at the close more was wanted, but holders were generally asking 2.75c. In addition there was a sale of 30,800 bags of Porto Rican for June shipment to an outport refiner at 2.72c. After an irregular opening futures firmed up on increased covering and buying by trade and commission houses, with final prices of 2 to 4 points net higher. Trading was more active, but considerable of it was in the form of exchanges, with the day's otal of 44,700 tons, including 15,600 in exchanges. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Southwest weather, crop, and the movement of wheat in that section are important factors in influencing action of all markets for the next thirty days. They create a bearish feeling in the trade and induce selling in southwestern markets with a weakening tendency which is reflected in Chicago. Favorable crop reports from the spring wheat sections of the American and Canadian northwest are also an important influence.

Should farmers in the southwest decide to move their wheat freely the question of storage room is an important factor. Kansas City has 37,000,000 bu of wheat and Chicago houses with connections there say there are only 4,000,000 bu of available storage room for the new wheat. In the meantime movement of wheat from the country is expected to enlarge steadily. Receipts of old and new wheat at Fort Worth yesterday were 65 cars; Hutchinson, Kas., 62 cars; Wichita, 45 cars; Salina, Kas., 44 cars.

It was pointed out as a bearish factor that July durum wheat in Duluth, which was recently 8c over Chicago, has dropped to ¼c discount. Traders who watch the spread between the different markets are predicting that northwestern wheat markets will weaken should crop conditions continue favorable.

July corn is showing more strength than the deferred deliveries. There is said to be a good sized short interest out, with open trades 13,802,000 bu. Stocks here are down to 10,677,000 bu, a decrease of 455,000 bu the last week. Traders for some time past have sold July freely, but of late the attention of spreaders between wheat and corn has turned to the September delivery.

CUT WHEAT WITH BINDERS

Reports from the southwest say that wheat, oats, and rye are being cut in numerous locations in Kansas by binders. Reports indicate that within a week binders will be at work in the fields over a large section. Rains have improved crop prospects. Some reports intimate that while rains the past week were favorable for wheat filling they also increased development of Hessian fly.

Estimated receipts at Chicago today: Cattle, 7,000; hogs, 17,000; sheep, 9,000.

Hogs worked up mostly 10c to the highest point in exactly a month. The top at $3.70 stood 20c above the close of last week, while the general average at $3.40 showed 10c gain over Saturday. Eastern houses were aggressive right from the start and soon after the opening smaller local packers also evidenced that they were in need of supplies. The first hogs above the $4.00 line in more than a month's time were reported at several eastern points.

Outsiders bought more than 18 per cent of yesterday's receipts and according to the trade the spread now warrants larger buying by eastern houses. The clearance was the best for Monday in recent weeks, only pen holders remaining at noon. Although there is much better action in hogs lately, price gains have been very mild. Not since the first day of April has the general average advanced more than 10c in one day. The stopping place for top hogs on every bulge since middle of last month has been $3.60. Yesterday's price, however, forged ahead of that mark on good support.

Cattle Prove Thirsty.

Liberal waterfills tended to slow down trading in the cattle alleys to some extent. Buyers are always cautious in sultry weather when shrinkage is an important item in their purchases. However, strength prevailed in most classes and good steers in many instances ruled strong to 25c higher considering the extra weight. Cattle were eager for water after their long trip to market. Many of the best grades came billed from distant feeding sections of Missouri, Nebraska, and Iowa. Eastern buyers set the pace in cattle selling at $7.00 and above, taking a big share of this class at advanced prices. Upwards to $7.65 was paid for steers and yearlings averaging 910@1,465 lbs. This was the highest price paid for cattle weighing less than 1,000 lbs since May 2.

The bulk of the supply of beef steers sold at $5.60@7.40, against $5.50@7.25 the previous Monday when quality was better. Only a small number of steers were plain enough to sell below $6.00, although odd lots of ill bred stock with an unattractive "kill" ranged down to $5.00. Grain fed cows and heifers were steady, while weakness appeared in grassy stock late. Calves declined mostly 25c.

Lambs Sell at $7.

The $7 lamb quotation put in an appearance again on yesterday's slight bulge, while packers bought the rank and file of offerings at $6.50 and below. City butchers made a few selections at the top. Sellers enjoyed the advantage of light supplies and got most of the receipts over the scales with lighter "sorts." However, all buck lambs were rejected from load lots at the usual $1 discount. Only ewe and wether lambs were eligible to the top quotations. Aged and yearling sheep were unchanged. Yearlings sold at $4.75 and below, while old mutton ewes brought $2.25 and less.
